SOILING COWS. Every year's experience in solling cowto increase the flow of milk, serves to prove the profit of this cheap way of feeding them. The plant most cultivated for this purpose in the Northern States is Indian Corn .-Under skilful management, several tons of rich green forage may be grown upon an acre, cut with a common grain cradle, or grass scythe, as needed by cows or other stock, and fed either in small fields, vards or stables. Many a dairy man in New York would have been compelled to folder his cows on dry hav in July, August and September last, owing to the severity of the drought, had be not wisely sown corn broad east or in drills early in the season, expressly to supply forage in summer and autumn, in case his pastures and meadows failed. All domestic quadrupeds need a full supply of food during all the warm months in the year; and it is the duty of the farmer to provide it for them. That it will pay to keep stock well, if it be kept at all, no sensible man will doubt. As evidence bearing directly on the question of soiling cows giving milk, we ask attention

PROFESSOR WOODpleasure and profit.

Dear Sir: I am doing an extensive travel in the West and South-western States, as general agent for Adams' American Liniment, and would be glad if you would favor me with a consignment of PRO-FESSOR WOOD'S HAIR RESTORATIVE, as I feel assured that I can introduce it in many places where it is not known, as my head is a living testimony of its valuable property, in restoring the hair to its natural color. I am forty years old, and my hair was almost white; but after using three half pint bottles, my hair is as beautiful auburn as it was at sixteen, and much improved in appearance, and I would not be without a bottle on hand for the price or ten. I should be very glad to attend from you soon. Very respectfully, W.M. B. BROOME.
