CUTTING IT THICK.

POLICY OF SOUTHERN PLANTERS

In many portions of the South, agricultural interests have prospered in spite of the defective systems upon which they have been conducted, as well as the entire absence of any system, as is the case in numerous instances.

The over production of cotton, to the almost entire neglect of cereal crops, and consequently the animal products dependent thereon, we have long felt convinced, has constituted the principal obstacles to the success of many of our planters. It may be worked out on paper that it is better to plant cotton, and buy bread, pork. males and horses with its products; but it is a notorious fact, that our planters who act on a different principle, and pursue exactly the opposite course, have become the wealthiest, most independent and comfortable class of the community. The truth is, the wealth of the country is to-day in the hands of just such men, and we invite any one who doubts it to look around among his neighbors, and he finds a practical attestation of its truth. It is the two and three bag planters than own nearly the entire country; lend money annually to the producers of ten bags, and come in as the chief distributees of the estate of the latter when they die. This is not only true, but it is the legitimate result of sound principles judiciously applied.

Could the planter have a guarantee of ten cents annually for his cotton, and that the price of flour would keep at six dollars per barrel, corn at forty cents per bushel, and pork at four cents, and that all these necessaries shall continue to be supplied at his own door, the figure work of the theorist might be regarded as a safe rule for his guidance. But nothing is more uncertain than the happening of these contingencies, and the very fact that his own policy is withdrawing labor from the production of these commodities, is one of the sure causes of the uncertainty. With cotton at five and six cents, and the necessaries of life at the common prices which we have had to pay for them for some years past, we can see no other fate for the man who confines his attention to cotton but inevitable ruin. In the long run the planter who himself produces what is necessary for the support and comfort of his family, and at the same time exercises a proper economy in his expenditures, is bound to become prosperous and independent. The whole history of the past fully establishes this fact. It is our intention mercly to glance at the subject in this article. Many arguments might be brought in to establish the position we are seeking to impress upon the mind of the planter. The difference between the effect produced on our lands by the production of cotton and those of the grain crops constitutes an important item which should not be left out of the account in an investigation of this subject. The last year presents a practical illustration of the soundness of the views we have presented. A large majority of our planters planted large grain crops and paid less attention to cotton, and the result has been more comfortable circumstances than they are and have been during the present winter. Their cotton have brought remunerative prices, while everything around them rejoices in comfort and plenty. The experiment has proved a successful one, and we hope it may be continued until it shall become the settled policy of our people .- [Savannah Republican.

This World is not all Cheerless. BY EMMA GARRISON.

This world is not all cheerless, Though sometimes dark and drear; There's a caim for every tempest, A smile for every tear; There's a ray of golden sunshine, To make each desett bright, A glittering star to gladden The deepest, darkest mght.

This world is not all cheerless-The heart m st lone and sad, Has sometimes pleasant memories To cheer and make it glad ; For love is ever twining Its roses o'er our way, And friendship's light is strining With pure, unchanging ray.

This world is not all cheerless, Though hope may pass away, And the things we cherish dearest, 'Neath time's cold hand decay ; For every grief that wrings the heart, And every tie that's riven, But brings our footsteps marer To happiness and heaven.

This world is not all cheerless; Then, as we journey on, Let every heart be b eathing A graceful, glad-some song, For the rich and countless blessings Around our pathway shed-

For the hope of bliss is heaven, When life's short dream has fled.

WOMAN.

The enthusiastic Kelmer thus discourses upon the fair sex: "Woman is indeed a bright and beautiful creature. Where she is, there is a paradise; where she is not, there is a desert. Her smile inspires love, and raises human nature nearer to the immortal source of its being. Her sweet and tender heart gives life and soul to dead and senseless things. She is the ladder by which we climb from earth to heaven. She is the practical teacher of mankind, and the world would be a void without her. She is more a celestial than a terrestial beingcharming and amiable as a girl, dutiful as a wife, and glorious as a mother. She is the balsam of a man's life-his faithful counsellor and pillow. She can impart all the pleasures to his cares of friendship, all the enjoyment of sense and reason, and all the sweets of life."

SPEAK KINDLY TO THE ERRING .--- NO bad man is ever brought to repentance by angry words, bitter and scornful reproaches. He fortifies himself against reproof, and hurls back foul charges in the face of his accuser. Yet guilty and hardened as he MARBLE YARD seems, he has a heart in his bosom, and may be melted to tears by a gentle voice. Whoso, therefore, can restrain his disposition to chide, and can bring himself down to a fallen brother, will soon find a way to better feelings within. Pity and patience are the two keys which unlock the human heart.

-----CLEANING WOOL

As some will cleanse, or attempt to cleanse their own wool, it may not be amiss to give some directions upon the subject. Ten years, experience qualifies me to say, that the following recipe will work well, with proper care. To four pails of water, add four quarts of salt; heat the solution as hot as you can bear the hand in it; put in the wool loosely, say 2 lbs at once; in ten minutes it will be cleansed; squeeze out the liquid, (which is better than before, for the second use,) and while the wool is warm rinse in plenty of water. Many use soap, pound the wool, or rub it on a wash-board; this is all wrong, as such a course fulls the wool like a felt hat, and fails to remove the | The Largest and most Fashiongum. It is difficult to convince such a practitioner that cleansing wool is a chemical process, not mechanical. Soap renders wool sticky. No one need fear having his wool "dropped" if it be well cleansed .-Clean wool is perfectly white and free from gum. Again, wool must not be left in a pile while wet, till it musts or mildews; if se, no machine I ever saw will card it well. I say again, pick out all burs, sort your wool as you want it, and take it together given, at the Emporium of Fashion, with the grease to the machine, and say to the carder, grease and card." If you do se, the chances are you will have good rolls. Perhaps others may know of a better recipe than the above.
