

BENEFITS OF FARMING. ITS REALTHINESS.

Agriculture from the constant and regular employment it gives, is conducive to health. The labor it requires is calculate: to knit the frame and give strength and vigor to the muscular system; besides, it is mostly carried on in the open air, which tends to promote a free and generous perspiration and gives tone and elasticity to the body ; while many kinds of mechanical and other employments are rendered unhealthy by the constrained position in which they must be performed, and the close confinement which is necessary in carrying them on. It is obvious that mind and body must be exercised fogether in order to pro mote a regular and healthy growth in both. Man is naturally ignorant and loves hi ease, and were it not for the strong hand of necessity he would often become idle, useless and wicked; the constant, and regular employment, therefore, which a farm re quires makes it producive of good morals; whereas, in other employments, where those engaged are more dependent on others, their labor is more irregular; this often leads them to spend a postion of their time in idleness, and thus bad habits are contracted, acquaintance is formed with persons of impure morals, and their character and standing in society are destroyed .-This is one among many reasons why persons living in cities are more liable to become profane, intemperate and vicious than those who reside in the country. The business of farming is one which renders mankind more or less independent of each other, but impresses their minds deeply with a sense of their dependence on divine Providence; for they know that they may cultivate the land in the best possible manner, and plant it with the best of seed; but unless God gives a favorable season they can raise no crop. They constantly realize the truth of the holy oracle, that "Paul may plant and Apollos water, but God giveth the increase." There is no employment that leads a man to reflection so much upon the character and works of God as farming, and consequently none is so conducive to morality and the practice of virtuous principles. FARMING PROMOTES HAPPINESS The employment is conducive to domestic happiness; for the farmer is seldom obliged to leave home for any great length of time, and from the facility with which a comfortable support for a family is obtained, he is often induced to marry early in life. upon each different object of Taxation as follows, Indeed the nature of his employment is to wit: such that it renders a female companion indispensable to the prosperity and happiness of a farmer. In nearly all other kinds of business "getting married" increases a man's expenses, but in farming it not only diminishes his expenses but increases his income; for the care of the dairy and poultry-yard, which are prominent items in the assets of many farmers' accounts, is almost universally confided to the female portion of the household. Lord Bacon tells us that the "improvement of On the ground is the most natural way of obtaining riches." And observation will convince any one that there is more stability and permanency in wealth acquired by On each $100 worth of Interest, farming, than fortunes obtained by trade and speculation. In most other callings an apprenticeship of several years is required to obtain a knowledge of the business, while in farming a young man of ordinary capacity can commence at once, and will have an ample return for his labor every year. An idea is extensively entertained that farming is more laborious than most kinds of mechanical business; but from experience we can say that it is the most pleasant, and agreeable business in which an intelligent man can be employed. The great diversity of exercise which it affords is equivalent to rest. Farmers do not generally work more than two-thirds as many hours in a day as tradesmen or many mechanics, and taking their business as a whole, it is not so laborious and far more agreeable than a majority of other employments. Its tendency is to enlarge the mind and beget feelings of disinterested benevolence, and a mutual participation of good offices. You will find more practical piety and pure christian benevolence among American farmers than among any other class of equal numbers in one country.

routine of duty to perform, day after day, is apt to be narrow minded and possess a weak udgment. Facts and observations prove that the minds of farmers of equal natural capacity, are generally superior to those of persons engaged in many other occupaions.

..... From the Southern Farmer. CUTTING WHEAT.

Though the propriety of cutting wheat in he dough state has been advocated as long as we can remember, yet we believe most farmers wait till the grain becomes hard, and the straw fully ripe. We believe, however, the harvest might be safely commenced when the wheat is in the dough state, not only with advantage to the portion first reaped, but with the additional advantage of being able to secure the remainder before the straw gets too dry. The grain may be said to be fully perfected when the stem, for a few inches below the ear, has changed to a golden color. In case of rust there is an obvious propriety in cutting at the earliest moment. After the attack has commenced, the wheat, so far from gaining anything by delay, suffers a daily loss .-For the satisfaction of those who may be in doubt as to the relative advantage of early and late cutting, we subjoin from the Tenaccount of an account of an

to one of our rural papers, two samples of Franklin, when he was an ambassawheat of the same kind, grown in the same field, but cut at different times. He states literary society, and not well understanding that one sample was cut on the 20th of June French, when declaimed, determined to last, in a green state, when the crushed gain had the appearance of thick dough ;the other sample was cut six days later in a ripe state, the ears drooping, and the grain firm and hard. Both samples remained in stack till the 17th of October. When the grain was threshed, it was found that the green cut portion was equally dry with the other! but besides that, the green cut man in Orange county, New York, mistook grain weighed twenty-eight ounces more per bushel than that which was allowed to stand till it was quite ripe; and the former has been also found to produce a better sample of flour, with one twelfth less bran." he was "trying to go up to bed, but some how or other these stairs wont hold still."

The ancients tell of angels bright, Who came to earth with glory laden, Who left the glittering heavenly band - To win the love of mortal maiden. And I believed it only fiction, I knew not then the urchin's power. I thought not then his winged shaft Could make me love within an hour. I thought not that the radiant charms Of woman, with their magic spell, Could rouse the slumberings of my soul, And make me love thee half so well. Caring not if woman smiled. I wandered heedless on my way,

My path with rosy garlands strewn Though still devoid of passions ray. While thus I stood and asked not for The changeful smile of woman bright. A vision came: with beauty crowned Shed o'er my soul a new delight. 'Twas then I loved with passion wild. 'Twas then I felt affection's flame. And longed upon my captize heart To carve thy sweet, thy loved name, Oh, could thine eyes peruse my thought, And read my heart with passion teeming ! Oh, could I see responsive thrills ! Or thy dear eyes with pure love beaming ! I now believe the ancient fable. To dwell with thee and be thine own, I well can see how one could come To live and love but thee alone. "JOE."

PROFITS OF FARMING.

Although farming does not always lead to the rapid accumulation of wealth, yet it yields a competence to the industrious and frugal, and is the most independent calling in life. The items of profit, though apparently small in themselves, amount, when those of the year are added together, to no inconsiderable sum. And a farmer's expenditures being less than is required by other kinds of business, nearly every article for the support of his family being raised night, the 11th of May, two neon his farm, his balance sheet shows a gto fellows healthy and thriving business at the end of the year. Dear Sir : Unsolicited, I send you this certificate. After being nearly bald for a long time, and havng tried all the hair restoratives extant, and having no faith in any, I was induced, on hearing o yours, to give it a trial. I placed myself in the hands of a barber, and had my head rus bid with a good stiff brush, and the restorative then applied, and well rubbed in, till the scalp was a glow. This I repeated every morning, and in three weeks the young hair appea.ed, and grew rapidly from August last till the present time, and is now thick, black, and strong-soft and pleasant to the touch; where as, before, it was harsh and wiry, what little there was of it, and that little was disappearing very rapidly. I still use your restorative about twice we k, and shall soon have a good and perfect crop of hair. WM. DYER. Brookfield, January 12, 1855. PROFESSOR WOOD-

Dear Sir: Having made trial of your HAIR RESTORATIVE, it gives me pleasure to say, hat its effect has been excellent in removing inlammation, dandruff, and a constant tendency to itching, with which I have been troubled from my childhood; and has also restored my hair, which was becoming gray, to its original color." I have used no other article, with anything like the same pleasure and profit. Yours, truly, J. K. BRAGG.
