

Selected Poetry.

THE STRENGTH OF LOVE.

They tell me that the rose will wed
With others of its kind,
And to the hearts which long have loved,
Its fragrance leaves behind.
That beauty in its tiny leaf,
A season sparkles bright;
But Winter, with its load of grief,
For ever duns the light.
They tell me that the lily dies,
When Summer zephyrs cease,
That waxy winds and lowering skies,
Annul the fleeting lease.
And though the modest petal blooms,
In simple lone valleys slender,
It, too, the season's gale resumes,
And in the grave is laid,
Ah! make not these the emblem of
That love to mortal given,
Which comes enriched with all above,
The choicest gift of Heaven.
No! love is like the sturdy oak,
That storms assault in vain,
That long survives the Winter's stroke,
To bloom in Spring again.

STRANGE OCCURRENCE.—A Western editor on entering his Office, and seeing his apprentice boy cutting some queer capers, called out to him—
"Jim, why are you on the floor?"
"Why, sir, I have had a shock!"
"A shock?"
"Yes sir."
"What kind of a shock?"
"Why, sir," said the lad, gasping, "one of your subscribers came in during your absence—said he owed for two years' subscription—paid it, and also paid another in advance."
"In advance?" gasped the editor, nearly as much overcome as his lone apprentice.
"Yes, sir, and I have prepared such an effect up my, that it has been perfectly helpless ever since."
"And well you may Jim. But get up, if you survive this you are safe, as there is little prospect of another such catastrophe in this office."

ROSES.—The old traditions are, that the rose sprang from the blood of Adam—that it was white and scentless till Venus trod upon one of its thorns, and, with her blood, gave it color and odour. There is a peculiar tradition, that Cupid gave color to the "blush rose," by holding it to Psyche's cheek. The fanciful origin of the rose, as given by Maundeville, is, that slanders had brought a fair maiden of Bethlehem to the stake, and that at her prayer Heaven quenched the fire, and turned all the brands into rose-trees, bearing white and red roses, the first that "ever may man smother."

It is not a little remarkable that roses, according to geologists, appear to have come into the world coeval with man, and that early Oriental legends identify the rose in every possible manner with the rites of Venus and the origin of human beings. Ros—the primitive root of rose, gives us in its converse the masculine alternate of Sor, which no philologist will hesitate to identify with Sur,—fire or the Sun—the masculine principle of creation.

GRAPE VINES IN GARDENS.—Grape vines delight in being well manured, and will not give the best satisfaction without a dry bottom and abundance of rich soil. At this period of the season, those who have trained grape vines in their gardens, should examine them thoroughly, to destroy caterpillar worms while they are small. One may now be found in almost every bud, rolled up in a pellet of fine wool. All the labor thus spent will pay for itself. During the warm, dry weather, the surface of the ground around the roots of vines should be covered with litter to protect the tender rootlets that spread out so near the surface.

It has been proposed to establish a printing press on board the Great Western, the mammoth ship now being built in England for the Australian trade, and to issue a daily paper during the voyage. In connection with this there is to be a reading-room, well supplied for the use of the voyagers.

ORIGIN OF GETTING THE SACK.—Two gentlemen, one a Spaniard, and the other a German, who were recommended by their birth and services to the Emperor Maximilian II, both coveted his daughter, the fair Helena Scharlequin, in marriage. The prince after a long delay, one day informed them, that esteeming them equally, and not being able to bestow a preference, he should leave it to the force and address of the claimants to decide the question. He did not mean, however, to risk the life of either, and consequently would not permit weapons to be used, but had ordered a large bag to be produced. It was his decree that whichever succeeded in putting his rival into the bag should obtain the hand of his daughter. This singular encounter took place, and before the whole court. The contest lasted for more than an hour, when the Spaniard yielded and the German Elsbard von Talbert, having "planted" his rival in the bag, took it upon his back and very gallantly laid it at the feet of his mistress whom he then espoused.

SHOCKING OCCURRENCE.—The Wolfboro' (N. H.) Pioneer says that on Thursday night a Mrs. Fulton, who is said to be drowned, drowned her little girl about one year old, in a small stream, putting a rock upon the body to keep it under. She then went to a neighbor's house, told the family what she had done, and requested them to go and take the body out lest the face might be disfigured by lying in the water.

OUR HOUSE.

FELLOW CITIZENS: The political horizon of our Country is darkening in the South by portentous clouds—clouds of dark fanaticism, arising from the North and spreading its dank, damp folds around our great American Emblem of Freedom, the Eagle.

STOCK OF GROCERIES.

Formerly owned by H. Severs, and have given it the cognomen as above, where all persons friendly to the South, or institutions of the United States, can at all times call (Sundays excepted) and be accommodated with an exhilating fluid, in the shape of a
Hot Whiskey Punch, Brandy
Toddy, Gin Cocktail, Wine
Sangaree, Foaming Beer,
Brown Stout Porter,
and in fact, Cordials, Syrups,
&c.
