Nor weigh a God's resolve. She might on pinions scour the deep, Where stars eternal roll; Yet she cannot resolve, if sleep Is destitute of soul.

She cannot demonstrate to mind An immaterial soul; How prove material links can bind, And immaterial hold.

How weigh a viewless principle, That is, and yet is not? How prove that it's invincible To time, whose fingers lock All nature in their ruthless grasp? How will the sage divine. If this within our temples bask,

Or in our hearts recline ! Ah! Science is too shallow here To draw a truthful line : This abstruse problem angel-seer Could scarce to us define. But soul we have a fadeless leaf That will forever be; 'Twill parallel with angels rell

The voice of inspiration proves That time will never roll, Nor erush beneath its iron boof Man's never-fading soul. It proves that soul can live and be Complete without a form Complete without a vehicle.

Through all eternity.

Its beauty to deform.

The form within the grave shall be, Until the judgment day. Then it from thraldom shall be free-Revived the sordid clay.

A fairer form we'll all assume,-Could it be like the old ? Perhaps, at least I'll so presume, The Scriptures have not told.

Ah, what a scene we'll there behold! The heart vibrates with fear: There Patriarchs and saints of old, The Christian's presence cheer. There bands scraphic will rehearse The doom a Jesus bore; Ay! there with Him they will converse When systems are no more.

OLD FASHIONED SPORTS .- Rough enjoyment was a fashion at this time with the fair Mrs. Sherwood in her pleasant Autobiography, adverts to this subject in speaking of her mother's early days, when undieladies of my age. One of these she described to give satisfaction or no sale. cribes as consisting of the following sort of Brand BOLTING CLOTHS, at violent fun. A large strong tablecloth was spread on the upper steps of the staircase, and upon this cloth the ladies inclined to the frolic sented, theraselves in rows upon the steps. Then the gentlemen, or the men, took hold of the lower end of the clath, attempting to pull it down stairs; the ladies resisted this with all their might, and the greater the number of these delicate creatures the longer the struggle was protracted. The contest, however, invariably end- stock at low prices will be found at ed by the cloth and the ladies being pulled down to the bottom of the stairs, when everything was found bruised except modesty. "High Life below Stairs" could hardly have TURAL IMPLEMENTS, &c. &c. been too rampant in its exposition, if it really reflected what was going on above. We hand and for side low by can hardly realise the matter. We hardly do so in merely faneying we see good Lord Shaftesbury, Admirat Gambier, Baptist Neel, and Dr. M'Neil engaged in settling Miss Martineau, Catherine Sinclair, the "Authoress of Amy Herbert," and Mrs. Fry, on a table cloth upon the stairs, and hauling them down in a heap to the bottom. It would be highly indecorous: but I am almost ashamed to say, I should like to see it .- Habits and Men.
