POETIOAL.

A THOUGHT.

The rose that's bent with summer rain, Or filled with early dew, Sheds richer perfume o'er again, And glows with lovelier hue. The pearly drops that light within Its leafy chalice rest, But fresher beauties for it win,

Its fragrant charms attest. So, hearts bow'd down with weight and care, Or cruhsed by bitter grief, Shew clearer what their virtues are,

While waiting for relief; Each tender sigh is sweet, that springs From hearts by sorrow riven; If on its parting breath it brings Some dearer hope of Heaven.

SONNET.

I know that things are not as most they seem In reason's flickering and deceptive beam; Man and his world are like a juggler's show, Where everything is nothing that we deem; And life, death, good, and ill in endless flow. Forms interchange like bubbles on a stream, So fast that each from each we cannot know, Last night I dreamed I was in highest Heaven, And saw Archangels in their dazzling day; And when to one more bright than all was given A cup whose radiance dimmed the diamond's ray, I prayed, That goblet's name, oh, deign to say, From which all draughts the hue of nectar borrow? He answered: In thy world its name is Sorrow.

ACTION OF LIME.

We extract the following communication upon this subject from the Southern Planter, Richmond, Va. It is from the pen of E. G. Ruffin, Esq. Some years since, I made an application of 30 bushels of lime to a measured acre of land, by way of experiment. This acre was similar in quality and character to the rest of the field, the whole being what is termed a clay soil. The field was put in corn and followed by oats and wheat, but no beneficial effect was discernible upon either of these crops. Indeed the whole seemed to be rather injurious than otherwise; and the lon Presses and all kind of Machiner remark may be extended to the three years it ret is luxuriance was mai stained throughout the season. This singular and unlooked for result, after a lapse of six years, led me to institute a series of experiments to ascertain the precise mole of action of lime. With this view seeds of wheat, and of other plants, were germinated upon cotton in glasses of water-and when of sufficient size, were transferred, half of them. to glasses containing pure water, the other half, to glasses containing water in which lime in its different forms had been dissolved. From these experiments, it appears that lime in any other form than that of a neutral salt, rather retarded than promoted the growth of plants. This result seemed to account for the uniformly beneficial effect of lime in those countries where it exists, as a natural ingredient of the soil, and the ques-artificially applied?

While reflecting upon the subject, it occurred to me, that the difference might safely be refered, in the first place, to the entire change of properties occasioned by the process of burning; old combinations being thus broken up, and new affinities evolved. And in the second place, to the opposite chemical relations of these soils inviting a favorable direction of these new affinities. Thus, clay is known to exhibit a slight alkaline reaction, and hence it may be reasonably inferred, that in these soils new affinities of the Lime will be expended entirely upon the decomposing organic remains; and so long as this process continues, there must necessarily be a conflict between the vital powers of the plant, and the chemical action of Lime, both contending for the same element-carbonic acid; nor will this contest cease until the Lime has returned back to its natural, or original state,-that of a neutral salt. In the instance which has been mentioned of the application of 30 bushels to an acre of clay soil, it would seem to be a fair inference that the unfavorable direction of the new affinition continued for a period of six years.

On the other hand, silex, which is the base of finities will be, to a considerable extent at least, diverted from the organic matters, and invited to the silex or silica acid, -thus forming a salt of lime which is perhaps more generally useful than any other. Of this fact, the old walls of buildings furnish this striking illustration.

my practice to sow Lime upon the wheat field at the rate of six or eight bushels only per acre, the aim being to secure what I term its physiological in contradistinction to its chemical action, and I am satisfied it is the best mode on soils of which the predominant ingredient is clay. Thus applied, the effect is generally soon visible in the improved color of the plants, and a permanently Evil, Salt Rheum and Ringworm, Ulcers and painful healthful green will always insure a yield commensurate with the fertility of the land. FRENCH WIVES .- A new kind of "immigration" scheme is being carried into execution in Paris. The English Australian colonies suffer from the scarcity of the fair sex even more than the French colonies from the want of negro labor. Several agents have arrived in the French capitol, and are offering large premiums, with the promise of a husband as soon as they arrive at the antipodes, to all French spinsters under the age of 30. They have collected about 100.

Spurgeon, the London sensationist preacher, sometimes gets off a good thing out of the pulpit however stupid he may be in it. A London letter to the portland State of Maine says: "A brother minister called to see him one day, rang the bell, and when the servant came to the door, the Rev. told him to inform Mr. S. that a servant of the Lord wished to have an interview wih him. The message was delivered to Mr. Spurgeon. 'Hum, ha, servant of the Lord-tell the person I can't see him, I am very busy with his master."

HOOPS, FALSE HAIR, HIGH HEELS, AND MATRIMONY .- An act was introduced into the English Parliament, in 1770, "that all women, of whateverage, rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids or widows, that shall, from and after such act impose upon, seduce and betray into matrimony, any of his majesty's male subjects, by the seent, paints cosmetic washes, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wool, iron stays, hoops, high heeled shoes, bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the law now in force against witchcraft and like misdemeanors, and that the marriage, upon conviction, shall stand null and void."

E. C. GRIER, Sheriff.

A. A. N. M. TAYLOR WOULD respectfully announce to the public that he continues to carry on business at the store on work of the latest fashions, in the most the corner formerly occupied by lluggins & Harty, where he keeps constantly on hand the largest assortment of STOVES ever offered in North Carolina; among which will be found the celebrated Iron Witch Cooking Store, which has gained such a famous reputation in the Southern country for the last eighteen months. This Stove he warrants superior to any Cooking Stove now in use. It is simple in its arrangements, consumes less fuel, and does more work in a given time than any other Stove in use. He will put one beside any other Stove of the same size in the United States, and if it does not do more work in any given time, he will forfeit the price of the stove, and quit selling and go for the better one. He has all kinds of Parlor and Box Stoves: and keeps constantly an extensive and varied Stock of Tin, Sheet-Iron, Japan, and Britannia Ware,
