THE GREAT GALUSHA .- Mr Galusha Grow, member of Congress from Pennsylvania, awoke the other morning and found himself a great man, having received the imprimatur and endorsement of Greely's Tribune, for defeating the Post Office Bill in the House of Representatives. The revolution was so great and sudden, from obscurity to greatness, that we doubt if the Honorable Galusha was not quite as much puzzled about his personal identity, as was the celebrated Jo. Nicholson, who, waking up from a fit of drunkenness and finding his horse gone, and himself alone with his cart, and being in some doubts as to who he was, where he was, and what he was, came to the very sagacious conclusion that if he was Jo. Nicholson, he had lost a horse-if he was not, he had found a cart. This wonderful achievement of Galusha's it seems, gives, him the leadership of the Black Republicans in the next Congress, and will probably make him the Speaker of that distinguished body. which of course places him in the line of promotion to the White House.
