6. Never be angry with those who address you contrary to your inclination, or tell you of your faults. Be grateful to them-they will often prove your best friends.

7. Never mention, as a reflection upon others, unpleasant circumstances that have occurred in their family-'tis mean-'tis pitiful.

8. Whatever request you may think proper to refuse, let it be always done with gentleness and a due regard to the feelings of those who make it. 9. Cultivate a cheerful and a contented disposituation with those around you who do not enjoy equal comforts. You will by this means learn how to be grateful.

10. Proper attention to dress ought not to be omitted; but avoid talking or thinking too much upon that subject:-remember it is the appendage of sin.

11. Remember that the object of speech is to pronunciation it be not rendered unintelligible. Never begin the relation of any circumstance unless you can finish it; as the contrary must denote want of reflection or intellect.

12. Never be the first to laugh at what yourself have said, lest it should happen that you laugh

13. Avoid contradiction-it is the bane of friendly intercourse; deliver your opinions freely, together with the reasons by which they are supported; if these fail to convince, let the subject on your part be dismissed.

14. Never treat your seniors with the fimilarity used towards those who are equal to you in age; ny against Kennedy, and had been threatened by although they may permit it, they cannot but think | the latter. His intention, it is thought, was to that you are intruding.

15. Never impart to any one what has been confidently committed to your charge-it is like disposing of another person's property. 16. Let your demeanor towards servants be gen-

Till thou hast questioned well thy conscious breast: What sacred duty thou hast left undone, What act committed which thou ought'st to shun, And as fair truth or error makes the deed, Let sweet applause or sharp reproof succeed; So shall thy steps, while this great rule is thine, Undevious tread in virtue's paths divine.

SCATHING REBUKE.

In the debate upon the Cuba question, Mr Seward characterized it as "the miserable, pitiful, false, fabulous pretended issue which the President of the United States has forced upon us." Mr Toombs replied to the scurrilous assault as

"But the Senator from New York is extremely valorous. I tell him that he has one valor that I never want to have. I never expect to stand in this body and say the gentleman occupying the Chief Magistracy of this country has uttered sentiments false, fabulous, and pretended. This charge is brought against the President of the United States. For forty years he has served his country. For forty years he has had the confidence of one of the largest States of this Commonwealth. For forty years he has held the relation of a gentleman here. For forty years he has been ready to defend his personal honor as a gentleman, wherever it was assailed. He has held himself responsible everywhere, in this body and elsewhere, to maintain his personal honor wherever it was assailed; and it is courageous in agentleman who is not ready to defend his honor anywhere, to assail the Chief Magistrate of the country with language that he dare not apply to a gentleman in a position to make him responsible; that he dare not apply to me.
