THE UNDER DOG IN THE FIGHT.

From the peasant up to the king, Has a different tale from the tale I tell, And a different song to sing.

But for me-and I care not a single fig If they say I am wrong or I am right-I shall always go for the weaker dog, For the under dog in a fight.

I know that the world, that the great big world, Will never a moment stop To see which dog may be in fault,

But for me, I never shall pause to ask Which dog may be in the right, For my heart will beat, while it beats at all, For the under dog in the fight.

But will shout for the dog on top.

Perhaps what I've said I had better not said, Or 'twere better I had said it incog; But with heart, and glass filled up to the brim, Here's a health to the bottom dog.

A RUSSIAN WOLF HUNT.

We translate the following story from a late tersburg:

Wolf hunting and bear hunting are the favorite pleasures of the Russians. Wolves are hunted in this way in the winter; when the wolves being hungry are ferocious. Three or four huntsmen, each armed with a double-barreled gun, get into a troika, which is any sort of a carriage, drawn by three horses-its name being derived from its team, and not from its form. The middle horse trots always; the left hand and right hand horses must always gallop. The middle horse trots with his head hanging down, and he is called the Snow Eater. The two others have only one rein, and they are fastened to the poles by the middle of the body, and gallop with their head free-they are called the Furious. The troika is driven by a sure coachman, if there is such a thing in the world as a sure coachman. A pig is tied to the rear of the vehicle by a rope or chain (for greater security) some 12 yards long. The pig is kept in the vehicle until the huntsmen reach the forest where the hunt is to take place, when he is taken out and the horses started. The pig, not being accustomed to this gait, squeals, and his squeals soon degenerate into lamentations. His cries brings out one wolf, who gives the pig chase; then two wolves, then three, then ten, then fifty wolves-all posting as hard as they can go after the poor pig, fighting among themselves for the best places, erazy; they run as fast as they can go. squeals-the horses neigh-the wolves howl-the guns rattle; it is a concert to make Mephistopheles jealous. As long as the driver commands his horses, fast as they may be running away, there is no danger. But, if he cease to be master of them; if they baulk, if the troika is upset, there is no hope. The next day, or the day after, or a week afterwards, nothing will remain of the party but the wreck of the troika, the barrels of the guns, and the larger bones of the horses, hunts-

Last winter Prince Repnine went on one of these hunts, and it came very near being his last hunt. He was on a visit with two of his friends to one of his estates near the steppe, and they determined to go on a wolf hunt. They prepared a large sleigh in which three persons could move at they selected for a driver a man born in the country and thoroughly experienced in the sport .-Every huntsman had a pair of double barrel guns with a hundred and fifty ball cartridges. It was night when they reached the steppe; that is an immense prairie covered with snow. The moon was full, and shone brilliantly; its beams refracte 1 by the snow gave a light scarcely inferior to daylight.

The pig was put out of the sleigh and the horses whipped up. As soon as the pig felt that he No one will be admitted into the PRIMARY DEPART- was dragged he began to squeal. THE HAREM OF THE SULTAN.

James Brooks, elder of the two brothers editing number of Mr Alexander Dumas' newspaper. It the New York Express, is now on a foreign tour, is an extract from one of his letters from St. Pe- and writing to his paper some very entertaining letters. From the one from Constantinople in Wednesday's issue, we take some highly interesting paragraphs.-The Sultan is now 35 years old, and he does not look much older, but he does look as if he had been wearied, and worried and teased, and caudled into a shadow of a man by his harem. The Sultan has only seven bona fide wives-that is, wives who have the privilege of producing an heir to the throne -But the Sultan has a whole regiment of other pretty women, the prettiest that can be found in Circassia, or Georgia, or elsewhere; and if Pera gossip be true, his heart is soft, his nature is kind, and they give him a world of trouble. They run him into debt, and though he forbids it, and says he won't pay, yet pay he does, and almost to his ruin. It is not a wonder, then, that with a harem of such women, he looks wearied and worried-for if one wife, in our land, employs and occupies a man, what can no better man do here with seven real wives, and a little army of wives just as real in point of fact? Nearly the whole harem was out to-day, to see him, or to attend him en route for his palace on the Bosphorus, to the Mosque near by. The curiosity of my profession, to say nothing of my curiosity as a man, was piqued to the utmost to see into the curtained carriages of this thus publicly Provo. exposed harem. His wife, while dating her letters from a southern city spoken of, and had but two hundred cartridges left while they employing some one to mail them there, had been all the time in Indiana-long enough to claim a that State, (which, I believe have since been modified by the Legislature.) As usual in such cases, she had notified him by publication, relying on the obscurity and limited circulation of the country paper as a guarantee that it would not come within his notice, and expected to get a divorce even before his suspicions were aroused. The half distracted husband rushed upon a train "What do you think the best thing to be done?" of cars just leaving for the East. EXCITING NEWS FROM UTAH.

Advices from Utah represent affairs in that territory as worse than they have ever been, either before or since the arrival of the army there. The ill-feeling had reached its culminating point, and the people were on the eve of open hostilities.

Differences also exist between Gov. Cumming and General Johnston, touching their respective powers, and there is likewise an opon rupture between the Executive and the Judiciary.

The Federal Courts find it impossible to exercise their functions, the Grand Jury refusing to find bills, and using every other means to screen parties accused of murder and other crimes.

Judge Cradlebaugh had discharged the jury, and had been compelled to discharge also all the prisoners in custody. On the occasion of the discharge of the juries, the Judge charged the Mormons with having obstructed the officers of the Court, suppressed testimony, and refused to make provision for the confinement and maintenance of prisoners.

Owing to the excited, state of the popular feeling a detachment of one thousand troops had moved from Camp Floyd, and encamped near Provo. Governor Cumming had issued a proclamation, defending the Mormons from the charges made against them. It is not stated whether he had demanded the withdrawal of the troops from

It is also stated that the Indians, about a thousand strong, headed by white men, had mustered in that neighborhood, who express a determination to prevent the arrest of any one in that section.

Judge Cradlebaugh emphatically denies that the Grand Jury protested against their discharge, as stated by the Deseret News.

A MARRIAGE DECLARED .- There was one case of some little interest, which came before the Court last week, says the Clarendon (S. C.) Banup in the form of an action to recover from the defendant compensation for the board of his wife:

"Some eighteen months since, a Marriage ceremony was performed by an individual claiming to be a Magistrate, but who in reality was not, and of the parties united together, the "worse half" intended the thing as a mere jest; but it was sufficiently evident from the testimony, that the woman in the case was not only herself very much in earnest, but believed the "gallant gay Lothario" a short one as all parties admitted, and the newly made Benedict departed after an hour or so, unconscious that the silken chain of the pseudo Magistrate were tied in too hard a knot to be undone but by death. The case came upon Tuesday and the Court very properly decided that the Marriage Contract was valid and binding, and gave a decree for the plaintiff.

We need scarcely say that we approve most heartily of the law of Marriage, as it exists in our State. Nothing further is necessary to establish the validity of a Marriage than the consent of the parties expressed before competent witnesses. The weaker sex cannot, as in other States, be imposed upon by the fraudulent practice of designing

Any one may solemnize a Marriage, and the mere declaration of the parties themselves in the absence of any more precise testimony is sufficient to establish the fact of their Material relation, as our Courts have decided in various instances.
