IN THE WRONG ROOM.

A friend of ours, who is liberally endowed with guage, "I was lighted to a room in the fourth story, at bed time. I had retired and was enjoying my "self-confessional." The room, although rather elevated, was commodious. In the hypoteover the street, could scarcely with all its penetrating powers force its inflected rays into my room, owing to the cloudiness of the atmosphere and the "bleached domestie" hanging before my windows. Orders left at I could see there were two-only when moving, howtheir store opposite the Presbyterian church will meet ever. My first thought was one of apprehension, but upon their going silently to bed, I resolved to play off a little joke upon my neighbors. I began to imitate an old man of the country, with his Gents' fine DRESS AND WALKING BOOTS made ophelide voice and lung-splitting cough. By his side apparently lay his beloved companion, wedging in a word or so of advice, when opportunity offered a chance. Even the innecent infant was not forgotten-aroused by the restle-sness of its parents, it manifested its vexations by plaintive E. H. Chapin, in a recent discourse, says: wailings. No time was taken to clothe themselves, for the door was immediately opened, and the "head" and "Bob" disappeared. It required all the nerve I possessed to restrain my laughter while my neighbors were decamping; vet I kept up the conversation between the 'old beloved' and mamma and the wailings of baby.

But a few moments clapsed ere my door was again opened, and the bar-keeper, with a candle, followed by the head and Bob, entered the room and approached my bed. I feigned heavy sleep. "You see you are mistaken," said bar-keeper. "1 tell you," replied the head, "that Bob and I were in that bed yonder; see where we rumpled it-and we heard a man, his wife, and I don't know how

FOUAL JUSTICE TO MAN AND WOMAN.-Rev.

"The refined woman recoils with virtuous scorn from her fallen sister, but often welcomes him by whom she fell. We are told that Christ said to the woman's accusers, 'He that is without sin other corner. "Bob, Bob!" whispered the head, among you, let him cast the first stone; but smitten burst my timbers if we hav'nt made a mistake by conscience, they went out one by one. It is not just that upon the woman "No, no! go to sleep-you are always thinking alone should fall the blot of shame. The text is a great lesson of charity and mercy, and it is a great lesson of justice also. There is neither justice, honor, nor delicacy in our modern custom, which scarcely frowns upon the guilty man, while pouring out all the vials of wrath upon the guilty woman. "Bob," now aroused to a consciousness of the pe- It may or may not be true, as some insist, that this foul cancer in society can never be eradicated; but we ought at least to insist upon it that the shame shall be fairly divided, that the sinning man shall be branded as deeply as the sinning woman, Suppose every guilty man bore the mark of shame in his face, in the market, or at church, how long would the cvil continue? But the meanness of man has thrust the whole shame upon woman.

> A STRIKING CONFIRMATION OF SCRIPTURE. One of the most interesting of the monuments of ancient Rome is the triumphal arch erected to commemorate the conquest of Jerusalem by Titus, who, after the destruction of the temple, made a triumphal march to Rome, bringing with him a long train of captive Jews and the spoils, among which were the sacred vessels of the temple. This procession is represented in the beautiful arch. which thus furnishes an illustration of the Bible no where else to be found, these being the only representations that exist of the sacred vessels, the table of the shew-bread, the golden candlestick with its seven branches, and the silver trumpets used by the priests to proclaim the year of Jubilee. The Roman Senate and people little thought, when erceting this monument to a deified emperor, that they were erecting a monument to the true God in the verification of prophecy and divine history. Not one of the Jews of Rome-of whom there are under the arch of Titus, although it spans one of the thoroughfares of the city; they shun it as a memorial of a subjugation of their nation, which has never yet been retrieved, and regard it with aversion .- New York Observer.
