A STORY ABOUT A KISS. We have frequently noticed that the staidest old maids have a most liberal notion of kissing. Frederika Bremer, with a simplicity and geniality eminently Christian, has ever a gentle word for the impulsive lover, if his heart is honest. We find this little story in her last book : "Certainly, you have observed how strangely, sometimes, the clouds at morning or evening, group themselves around the sun, and are lighted up by it, and you have thought sometimes: "If this should be represented in painting people would say, it is unnatural, it is untrue." So even in human life. We often find events, looking, when related or described in books, unnatural, and yet they are perfectly true in reality to nature .-If any one should tell that, once, a first kiss was given by a modest young lady, publicly, and in a public square, to a young man she saw for the dies, and young gentlemen and old gentlemen,

"In the university of Upsala, in Sweden, lived a young student-a lonely youth, with a great loved by his young comrades. Once he was standing with some of them in the great square of How A PRINTER ROSE.—The Lincolnshire Upsala, prating away an hour of leisure, when the an elderly one, walked slowly over the place. It governess. She was generally known for her Well, it would be worth something to have a kiss from such a mouth !' The poor young student, on that pure and angelic face, exclaimed, as if by inspiration, 'Well, I think I could have it.'-'What!' cried his friends in chorus, 'are you 'crazy? Do you know her" etc. 'Not at all,' he answered; but I think she would kiss me, just now, if I asked her.' 'What in this place, before all our eyes?' In this place, before your eyes.' 'Freely?' 'Freely.' Well, if she will give you a kiss in that manner, I will give you a thousand dollars!" exclaimed one of the party. 'And I!" 'And I!' cried three or four others, for it so happened that several rich young men were in the group, and the bets ran high on so improbable an event, and the challenge was made and received in less time than we take to relate it. "Our hero-my authority tells us not whether he was handsome or plain-I have my peculiar reason for believing that he was rather plain, but singularly good looking-our hero immediately walked to meet the young lady. He bowed to her and said, 'My lady (minfroleen); my fortune is in your hand.' She looked at him in astonishment, but arrested her steps. He proceeded to state his name and condition, his aspirations, and related truly and simply what had just passed between him and his companions.-The young lady listened attentively, and when he had ceased to speak, she said blushing, but with great sweetness: 'If by so little a thing so much can be effected, it would be foolish in me to refuse your request,' and she kissed the young man publicly in the open square. 'Next day the young student was sent for by the Governor. He wanted to see the young man who dared to ask a kiss of his daughter in that way, and whom she had consented to kiss so .-He received him with a severe and scrutinizing brow, but after an hour's conversation was so pleased with him, that he offered him to dine at his table during his studies at Upsala.

Our young student now pursued his studies in a manner which soon made him regarded as the most promising scholar at the university .-Three years were not passed after the day of the first kiss, when the young man was allowed to give a second one to the lovely daughter of the Governor as to his intended bride. "He became, later, one of the greatest scholars in Sweden, as much respected for his learning as for his character. His works will endure forever among the works of science, and from his happy union sprung a family well known in Sweden in the present day, and whose wealth of fortune and things, compared with the wealth of goodness & love.' MRS. POLK .- A correspondent says that it is a remarkable and fitting token of public regard, that annually on the first day of the new year, both houses of the Tennessee Legistature formally adjourn and proceed in a body to pay their respects to Mrs. Polk. LIBERAL OFFER .- Paris papers bring an item, rise to a true knowledge and sense of our position will declare, at the end of September, 1860, and
