CHARLOTTE, N. C.

WIL., CHAR. & RUTHERFORD RAILROAD .- A ingham, Richmond county, on the 23d inst., for the purpose of considering the amendments to the charter made by the last Legislature. We learn from a gentleman who was present that the amendments were accepted unanimously. A resolution was passed conferring on the Agent of any county. which has subscribed to the stock of the company. nower to appoint a proxy to act in his stead. The next annual meeting of the Company is to be held in Charlotte on the 14th of October.

BANK OF CHARLOTTE. This Bank has declared a semi-annual dividend of four per cent., payable on and after the 7th of July.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Bank will be held on Wednesday the 6th of July

THE CROPS .- We passed through eight or ten counties in the middle and eastern part of the state week before last. The corn crop everywhere looked fine, better, we think, than it does in this section. The wheat was mostly harvested, but we learned from planters that the yield was as good as usual, though we judge, from what we saw, it is nothing like as fine as in this part of the State. Oats appeared rather stunted, but we heard no serious complaint about the crop. Within the past two weeks there have been timely rains an abundant yield of everything is cheering and gratifying to the producer as well as the consumer. For these things, and the general good health of the different communities, sincere and heart-felt and ever merciful Providence.

FALSE REPORT-The report circulated in several of the western counties of this State, that Hon. T. L. Clingman had written home advising the reorganization of the Whig party in order to save the country, is false and without the least foundation in fact. The Asheville News says Mr Clingman regards the democratic party as the only one which has any claim to nationality, and the only one which can save the Government from passing into the hands of the Black Republicans The report was started to aid the election of Vance, whose chance the News considers rather slim.

DEATH OF AN EDITOR .- F. E. Boner, Esq., Junior Editor of the Winston Sentinel, died at Danbury on the 18th inst. of consumption.

FOURTH DISTRICT - Linn B. Sanders, of Johnston county, has announced himself a candidate for Congress in the 4th or Raleigh District, in opposition to Mr Branch, democrat. Sanders is a landgrabbing, mongrel, go-between, milk and water democrat-a very poor specimen of a politician at best. Messrs Branch and Sanders had a discussion at Raleigh on Saturday night, and we should judge from the account we find in the Press, that Linn B. was pretty much used up, notwithstanding he was backed by Duncan K. McRae and Mr Syme, editor of the Register, both of whom interrupted Mr Branch during the discussion.

The New York Tribune (a nigger-loving paper) is very angry because the University of North Carolina conferred on Mr Buchanan the degree of Doctor of Laws. It speaks of this State as the "Great Tar Pot and Rosin Reservoir of the Union," and endeavors to ridicule the University. The cause of the Tribune's wrath, no doubt, is the tact that the University expelled Prof. Hedrick ments, and because the citizens of the State tar and feather and drum out of town the low-life scoundrels who come among them from the North to electioneer for the Tribune and to steal negroes and horses. Tar suits their skin very well, and ing remarkably fine. while the application is being made they are as humble as lambs, but as soon as they get in the land of the Tribune office they become as bold as lions. Probably the writer of the article in the Tribune has leared something of the sticking qualities of tar and rosin; if not, we think if he will come out here, the boys will give him a lesson.

Now, if the Mercury means by this that the "high ground," taken by the Goggin party in contra-distinction to the Botts-Greely faction, will drive the democracy to ignore those principles upon which the Missouri Compromise was repealed, it has certainly misinterpreted the signs of the times. The southern democracy will not be frightened into eating fire upon what the Mercury is pleased to term the "right southern ground," simply to compete in "ont-Heroding Herod" with a southern disunion party. The democracy in the Charleston Convention will stand just where the democracy in the Convention at Cincinnati stood -upon the ground assumed in the Kansas-Nebraska bill-that the people, and not Congress, have the right to regulate their own internal affairs, subject to appeal, in cases of oppressive legislation, to the Courts. The wall of separation built by the Goggin party in Virginia between the northern and southern opposition, (which separation we think exists only in the imagination of the Merthroughout the whole State, and the prospect of eury,) would, were it real, only facilitate the sucthose principles in 1860 which swept the country in 1856. If the Mercury hopes that the Charleston Convention will place in its platform the disthanks should be rendered to an all-wise, all-good tinet affirmation of the right of the South to Congressional interference with slavery in the Territories, it will be most egregiously disappointed; for the democracy will only pursue that course der date of the 22d, that the Wheat crop in that by which alone the just rights of the South can intervention by Congress in the territories.

They may prate about squatter-sovereignty as loud as they please, but popular-sovereignty, as set forth in the act organizing Kansas, is a fundamental principle of republican government, and the people will pass approvingly upon it as a quietus to the everlasting slavery question.

No more agitation of the slavery question in Congress is what the people desire. The South can secure her rights from the Courts in less time and in a much safer manner than by Congress. There is no squatter-sovereignty about non-intercountry to peace and quiet, give back to the South her lost equilibrium in Congress, and completely kill off those political stock-jobbers, North and South, who live by changing their principles, and trimming their sails for every breeze that offers the least assistance in bearing self upward and BEAUFORT.

We were much pleased with a trip to Beaufort, N. C. week before last, and feel certain that no one can go there and mingle with the intelligent and hospitable population, and enjoy the good eating and refreshing sea breeze, without being convinced that there is no necessity to leave North Carolina for recreation or Beaufort is located at the mouth of Newport River. mmediately in front of one of the best Harbors south of Norfolk, and in full view of the ocean, with Fort Macon and three light-houses in sight. The population of the town, we suppose, is about 2,000. In a commercial sense, the town has suffered and never had the position she is entitled to in consequence of a sandhoal obstruction near the wharves, which prevents the near approach of vessels of heavy draft for loading and unloading. But by the energy of her citizens this difficulty, it is confidently expected, will soon be overcome, as there is now a dredge boat constantly employcess of the democracy, and insure a triumph of ed in removing the obstructions, which, if successfully accomplished, will prove a lasting benefit to the place.

The facilities for recreation and pleasure at Beaufort are abundant. The Ocean House, kept by George W. Taylor, is not inferior in fare to the best in the country. With fish, oysters and turtle soup every day (the finest fish we ever tasted) and a sail on the Harbor whenever desired, there is nothing to prevent the lean man from growing fat and the invalid from forgetting all his ailments. Mr Taylor's house is not as large as his patronage requires, but what is wanting in this respect he makes up by untiring exertions to please and render his guests comfortable. We are not in the habit of complimenting landlords (for we pay our way wherever we go like other people, and therefore never feel under any obligations to bestow praise,) but we must say that Taylor "knows how to keep a Hotel," and if those who intellect until it cannot grasp the merest trifles stop with him are not pleased and satisfied it will not He cannot be a man of fortitude, he is too en-

FAYETTEVILLE.

We spent a few days last week at Fayetteville, formerly the trading town of a large portion of western ter north-west from Wilmington, and 60 miles south of my name to the convention, if they see proper Raleigh. The town covers more space than any other in the State. (but is not as compact as Wilmington or streets are 100 feet wide, the others about 75 feet. There are about 100 mercantile houses, a large num ber of mechanical establishments, with three printing offices and seven churches. The merchants are energetic and liberal in their dealings, and to their credit be it said, they are now doing all they can to again build up the trade of their town. The mechanics are the United States either establishes or prohibits tlemanly deportment, are not surpassed anywhere or for many years the centre of an extensive trade, but by the construction of the various railroads in the State ner trade was diminished to a discouraging extent until within two or three years past, when a favorable change took place and the good old town began to increase in business and energy, and we were more than gratified to learn that the trade of the past year was far pletion of the Western Railroad (running from Fayetteville to the coal fields on Deep River) and the advantages of steamboat navigation to the ocean (there being nine Steamers with Lighters plying between Wilmington and Fayetteville) the town will soon regain her former prosperity and position as a great commercial mart.

While in Fayetteville we paid our respects to Messrs Sinclair & Pearce of the Carolinian, the Messrs Hale of construction of the Road across the Blue Ridge at the Observer, and formed the acquaintance of Rev. Mr Miller, one of the editors of the Presbyterian. The Carolinian is a democratic paper, published daily and weekly, and is edited by Mr Sinclair with ability and but a good, reliable newspaper nevertheless, and is still receiving abundant support. For the Western Democrat. BUILDING AIR-CASTLES.

This is a very common and certainly a very pernicious habit. It is the growth of leisure hours. One who toils daily with head or hand has no taste or time to indulge it. Practical persons never cultivate it, because it unfits them for the plain, unvarnished realities of every-day life; and because, it may be, they do not generally have an imaginative turn. Doubtless it is to the imaginative class that this habit mostly attaches, and especially, though not exclusively by any means, to the young. Many a boy has spread himself in vacation in "the rosy time of the year" upon a sunny hillside, and breathing the free, sweet air, felt a dreamy langour steal over him as he watched the white caps of cloud float lazily along, saw a bundred fanciful images in them, and an unspeak-We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to able beauty in the fair, deep blue of the sky, and then no doubt he built a castle or two, but they on Saturday next. See programme of proceedings were soon torn down; and there was an end of it. If by an unlucky chance he carried this habit into the school-room, most probably it resulted in the teacher's cutting short the growth of some promising switch in the immediate neighborhood of the schoolhouse, and with fanning the lint off his roundabout in the neatest imaginative manner. For by the time the young castle-builder has begun fairly to sketch to himself the outlines of his future brilliant career, his vacant eye, listless expression of countenance, and untouched book betray him, and a rap of the teacher's rule upon the table startles him into seeing a dull schoolroom, and the dry text of his Latin Reader, of which he has not translated a line. Poor fellow, he was fast becoming a great man; he was an orator, statesman, dramatist; he was tickling his vanity delightfully with the feather of his goosequill, when the rap recalled him to an unprepared lesson, and presently to recitation and the sad actuality of a whole-

Many a man is a castle-builder, and ah! how many women. He who cultivates this habit has his home in the air, anywhere, everywhere, except just in the particular spot where he happened at the time to be; and he is surrounded by entirely different persons, characters, things, circumstances than those that are about him. He is thus necessarily morbidly sentimental in proportion as this habit grows upon him, and consequently unhappy. Dissatisfied with things as they are, he vainly imagines a thousand things that are not, and feels a certain sense of regret that they cannot be as he wishes. It is evident that such a person has few actual cares or troubles, if indeed any at all, but he is hunting, with the keen wish of a sportsman, a host of imaginary ills. Is it not equally apparent that long indulgence of his favorite propensity gradually unfits him for business, for happy social and domestic relations, for the "small sweet courtesies of life," and fritters away a naturally fine to bear up against misfortune when it does come, an increasing love for novel-reading, chronic ill-We were struck with the healthy and robust appear- temper and the very antipodes of cheerful, bustling X. A speculator by the name of Patterson has a large lot of flour at Post's Mill, which he is holding for an advance, in view of the recent damaging frosts.
