

THE PEOPLE IN THE HOUSE.

Some love the glow of outward show, Some love mere wealth and try to win it; The home for me may lowly be, If I but like the people in it. What's the gold that glitters cold, When linked to hard or hanghty feeling? Whate'er we're told, the noble gold Is truth of heart and manly dealing. Then let them seek, whose minds are weak, Mere fashion's smile, and try to win it; The house for me may lowly be, If I but like the people in it.

That lowly flowers are often fairest, And trees whose bark is hard and dark May yield us fruit and bloom the rarest. There's worth as sure 'neath garments poor, As e'er adorned a leftier station; And minds as just as these, we trust, Whose claim is but of wealth's creation Then let them seek, whose winds are weak, Mere fashion's smile, and try to win it; The house to me may lowly be, If I but like the people in it.

THE WAY THE ENGLISH BRING UP CHILDREN. -The English bring up their children very differently from the manner we bring up ours. They have an abundance of fresh, out-door air every day whenever it is possible. The nursery maids are expected to take all the children out airing every day, even to the infant. This custom is becoming more prevalent in this country, and should be pursued wherever it is practicable. Infants should be early accustomed to the open air. MAMMON vs. HYMEN .- The Greenfield (Mass.) Gazette has the following :

"A curious circumstance occurred on Wednesday. A young man in this village procured a clergyman to marry him, and, after the guests had all assembled and the knot was about to be tied, the would-be bridge-groom was called out of the house, and soon, informing the elergyman and guests that he would be back in a moment, mysteriously disappeared; and, after waiting an hour, the clergyman left for the Sunday-school celebration, lotte & Rotherford Railroad passes through the tract. leaving the intended bride and her friends in doubt as to the mysterious disappearance of the purchasers.
