ABOLITION IMPUDENCE .- It is stated that a French Drap d'Ete and Alpacca Frocks and Sacks; a few days ago a "Wide Awake" Lincoln Club in Philadelphia, numbering 900, while marching through the streets, learning that a number of Southern gentlemen were stopping at the Continental Hotel, called a halt in front of that establish ment, and gave three cheers for old John Brown and groans for the southerners. These Wide Awake clubs are drilled black republicans-taught the partment, to which they call the especial attention of manual exercise, and are prepared to substitute muskets for the lantern polls which they now carry.

What does all this mean on the part of the enemies of the South? Is it not time for the southern people to stand square up for their rights? The or 6 men to take the large boat round to the hole safety of all demand it. STATEMENT OF MR SMITH. Michael E. Smith was among the number saved. He was on the float with Capt. Wilson, and gives the following statement of the disaster:

The steamer had on board some 150 or 180 head of cattle, which were thrown overboard by order of the Captain. The Captain then ordered all the passengers to had adjusted themselves, the blood ran down from get life-preservers; I think the most of them did. He then ordered the crew to take axes and break thinking it would sink. The hurricane deck separated into five pieces-there were 25 persons on the piece with me and Capt. Wilson. We held up cabin doors for sails, and came down smoothly as far as Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized. Some of us got back on it, among them the captain and myself. The Captain got one of the ladies back, when a big sea came and washed us off. The Captain was the last man on the float. I heard him cheering the passengers, when another sea came and washed him off and he was drowned.

When daylight dawned, the four rafts were in sight, and a great many persons floating on pieces of the wreck. About 40 persons succeeded in reaching the shore by means of floats, rafts and pieces of the wreck The greater part of them were of the excursion party from Milwaukie. Mr Lumsden, editor of the New Orleans Picayune, and family, were lost.

Numerous incidents are told showing great heroism, or the total want of such a quality, on the part of the drowning people. It was about ten o'clock in the morning when exertion to get round to the hole. The passengers hove to, to enable her to come up. As the Conthe Constitution was discovered The Guerriere stitution neared us, Capt. Dacers handed me his glass, and asked what I took her to be. My reswung round the stern of the steamer, a sea struck ply was "She looks like a frigate." Very soon she came within reach of the long guns of the Guerriere, which were fired, but without effect, as the sea ran high. The Constitution made no reply, but, as I saw, was manœuvring for a position, during which, Capt. Duores said to me, "Do you think she is going to strike without firing?" replied, "I think not, sir."

At this moment, seeing a severe contest was Dacres, and said to him-"With your permission, sir, I will go below, as I can take no part." "O. certainly," said he, "and you had better go into the cock-pit, and should any of our men chance to get wounded, I shall feel obliged to you if you will assist the surgeons in dressing them." "Certainly, sir," said I, and then descended into the cockpit. There were the surgeons and surgeons' mates, and attendants, sitting around a long table covered with instruments and all necessaries for dressing the wounded, as still as a funeral. Within one or two moments after my foot left the lower round of the ladder, the Constitution gave that double broadside, which threw all in the cock-pit

over in a heap on the opposite side of the ship. For a moment it appeared as if heaven and earth had struck together; a more terrific shock cannot be imagined. Before those in the cock-pit the deck as if a wash-tub full had been turned over, and instantly the dead, wounded and dying, were handed down as rapidly as men could pass them, them. Nearly every passenger got out; though till the cock-pit was filled, with hardly room for the surgeons to work. Midshipmen were handed down with one leg, some with one arm, and others wounded in almost every shape and condition. An officer who was on the table having his arm amputated, would sing out to a comrade coming down wounded, "Well, shipmate, how goes the battle?"
Another would utter some joke that would make even the dying smile, and so constant and freely were the playful remarks from the maimed and even dying, that I almost doubted my own senses. Indeed, all this was crowded into a space of not over fifteen or twenty minutes before the firing ceased. I then went upon deck, and what a scene was presented, and how changed in so short a

The Constitution looked perfectly fresh-and, even at this time, those on board the Guerriere did not know what ship had fought them. On the other hand, the Guerriere was a mere rolling log-almost entirely at the mercy of the sea. Her colors all shot away; her main-mast and mizzenmast both gone by the board; and her fore-mast standing by the mere honey-comb the shot had made. Capt. Daeres stood with his officers surveying the scene-all, all in the most perfect astonishment. At this moment a boat was seen putting off from the hostile ship for the Guerriere. As soon as within speaking distance, a young gentleman, (Midshipman Reed, now Com. Reed,)

As an answer to this, however, we were called pon vesterday by a prominent Democrat of Nev Jersey, who relates to us that previous to the late Convention in that State, two of Douglas' supporters called upon him at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in this city, and informed him of the terms of union likely to be adopted in that State. Mr Douglas denounced them openly and unreservedly. They replied: "Why, Mr Douglas, your advice would certainly give the State to Lincola."

"Then let it. It will give us the organization in 1864," was Mr Douglas' reply.
