Q. Do they get no credit for it?

A. Nary bit. You see the soap-tails do all the talking, having more time to devote to the bellows han the working men, and they say when the liberal give a dollar they just add that much more profits on their saleable articles, which the country is bound to have.

Q. Is it certain that any person does this? A. Without a doubt, a great many do add on blockade, war tax, and many other items too numerous to mention.

Q. Is it men that have been born and raised among us? A. Yes sir, and some others.

Q. What is patriotism now a days? A. Talk big, tell what you have done, what you gwine to do, make out you've done everything and nobody else has done nothing, pay all your taxes and make 'em up on yer customers, add a little more to the price every time you see the word "blockade," oppress the people, and especially the poor; they aint got no business to be

PRAYING FOR A DYING ENEMY.

A correspondent of the New Orleans Crescent says: "A most touching scene took place in a late skirmish with the enemy. Among those mortally wounded was a northern man; he was shot through both hips and had fallen on the road, where he was discovered by a Louisianian. He was suffering the most intense pain, and begged for water, which was promptly given him, his head and shoulders raised to make him more comfortable, and his face and forehead bathed in water. He urged the Louisianian to pray for him, who was forced to acknowledge his inability to pray. At that moment a Virginia trooper came up and the poor tellow urged his request again with great carnestness. The Virginian knelt at his side and asked the wounded man if he was a christian and believed in the promise of Christ to save repentent sinners. He answered yes. The trooper then commenced a prayer, fervid, pathetic and eloquent; the soldier's face lost all trace of suffering and became placid and benignant, and in his new born love for his enemy, attempted to encircle his neck with his arm, but only reached the shoulder, where it rested, and with his gaze rivetted on the face of the prayerful trooper, he appeared to drink in the words of hope and consolation, the promises of Christ's mercy and salvation, which flowed from his lips, and as the solemn amen died on the lips of the christian soldier, the dead man's hand relapsed its hold and fell to the ground, and his Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions-July Term, 1861. spirit took its flight to unknown realms. The John Hicks vs. The Mecklenburg Gold and Copper Co. scene was solemn and impressive, and the group were all in tears. The dying never weep, 'tis said.
