For the Western Democrat. Dedicated to the memory of Miss Lou Frasier.

Thy days, Dear Lou, were few-yea, few-But worth a life, a long, long life; Thy words,-sweet words-like heavenly dew, Refreshing were through care and strife.

Thy years, Dear Lou, how fleet they seemed; Thy tender age just reached eleven, And yet thy mind with brilliance beamed: It beamed on earth, now beams in heaven.

Thou'rt gone, Dear Lou, yes, thou art gone-That face, so bright, so mild, so sweet, No longer here to cheer us on-To realms where Saints and Angels meet.

Thou'rt missed, Dear Lou, yes, sadly missed, Thy absence presseth deep and sore; Yet sweet the thought thou'rt gone to Christ, To live with him for ever more.

We sigh, Dear Lou, ah! yes, we sigh, And mingle bitter tears with grief; But still we know that thou art nigh, Thy spirit whispers sweet relief.

Thy last, Dear Lou, thy last request-It moves the heart, it moves the soul-"Meet me in Heaven," there we shall rest: In bliss we'll dwell while ages roll.

BURIAL OF SIR JOHN MOORE. Recent accounts of the death and hurried burial of some of the officers and soldiers in the Southern army have brought to mind those wonderfully stirring lines, composed by Rev. Charles Wolfe. in 1817, on the burial of Sir John Moore. I think your readers will be pleased to see them reproduced at the present time, and in connection, the following notice, taken from "Chambers' Cyclopædia of English Literature," of the author and

"Rev. Charles Wolfe may be said to have earned a literary immortality by one short poem, and that copied, with considerable closeness, from a prose account of the incident which it relates. Reading in the Edinburg Annual Register a description of the death and interment of Sir John Moore, on the battle-field of Corunna, this amiable young poet turned it into verse with such taste, pathos, and even sublimity, that his poem has obtained an imperishable place in our literature."

The passage in the Register is as follows: "Sir John Moore had often said that if he was killed in battle, he wished to be buried where he tell. The body was removed at midnight to the Citadel of Corunna. A grave was dug for him on the ramparts there, by a body of the 9th Regiment. No coffin could be procured, and the officers of his staff wrapped the body, dressed as it was, in a military cleak and blankets. The interment was hastened, for about eight in the morning some firing was heard, and the officers feared that, if a serious attack were made, they would be ordered away, and not suffered to pay him their last duty. The officers of his family bore him to the grave; the funeral service was read by the Chaplain, and the corpse was covered with earth.'

How often within the last few months, have such touching scenes as this been witnessed on "the dark and bloody ground" of Virginia!

Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note, As his corpse to the rampart we hurried: Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot, O'er the grave where our hero we buried.

We buried him darkly at dead of night, The sods with our bayonets turning, By the struggling moonbeam's misty light, And the lantern dimly burning.

No useless coffin enclosed his breast, Not in sheet or in shroud we wound him; But he lay like a warrier taking his rest, With his martial cloak around him

Few and short were the prayers we said, And we spoke not a word of sorrow, But we steadfastly gazed on the face that was

And we bitterly thought of the morrow. We thought, as we hollowed his narrow bed, And smoothed down his lonely pillow, That the fee and the stranger would tread o'er his head,

And we far away on the billow! Lightly they'll talk of the spirit that's gone, And o'er his cold ashes upraid him;

But little he'll reck, if they let him sleep on In the grave where a Briton has laid him. But half of our heavy task was done, When the clock struck the hour for retiring; And we heard the distant and random gun

That the foe was sullenly firing. Slowly and sadly we haid him down, From the field of his fame fresh and gory;

We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone, But we left him alone with his glory!

AN ARMY ANECDOTE -The Monticello (Fla) Friend publishes the following:

Dr. Palmer, Surgeon of the 2d Florida regiment, relates a good joke on himself, which happened during one of the hotly contested battles below Richmond. It appears the Doctor always endeavored to select a building for a hospital as near the point where the battle raged as possible. On this occasion no suitable building could be found, and the shade of a large tree was resorted to. Upon approaching the place, an old gentleman, in citizens dress was observed reclining at its trunk. Dr. P., supposing him to be a straggler from one of the regiments, demanded to know what he was doing there. The only reply made by the old gentleman was: "I reekon there is room enough for both of us." The Doctor manifested some displeasure at this very unsatisfactory reply, but proceeded immediately to clear the ground for the reception of wounded soldiers. Presently a courier rode up, exclaiming, "Dispatches for General Lee." The supposed straggler immediately arose and received them. Dr. Palmer was astonished and chagrined and commenced a retreat, when Gen. Lee observing him, cried out: "Don't leave, Major, there is room enough for both of us.'

AN EXEMPT .- The following (says the Zanesville, Ohio, Courier) was picked up near the desk of the Drafting Commissioner's office in that city:

"I certify that I am lame, have a broken back, hip out of joint, a crooked arm, and am railroad engineer, am clerking in the Postoffice; also have charge of a Telegraph office and a wife and baby, will be made for a duplicate of the same. am opposed to fighting-have joined the Quakers.

FREE TRADE. - Southern manufacturers, who have taken advantage of the blockade to demand extravagant prices for their products, have at the same time afforded a practical argument against "protective tariff" which no amount of political apphistry can rebut.
