WESTERN DEMOCRAT, CHARLOTTE, N. C.

WHAT THE SOUTH HAS ESCAPED FROM.

A review of Yankee monopoly would be incomplete without a glance at the home market. As every article the South imported and exported passed through Northern hands, paying them a uple tribute, it could not be expected that our domestic wants would be allowed to escape without paying Yankee toll. From the hour a Southerner entered this world until he departed for the next, it seemed as if he only existed to be an obi et of profit to the "universal Yankee nation." In childhood he was clothed in Yankee fabrics, so thed in illness with Yankee cordials, rocked to sleep in a Yankee cot and taken out to air in a Yankee carriage. His boyhood was spent in with Yankee toys-for hoop, top, marble and ball, were all from Yaukeedom. In manhood he was merely a walking exhibition of Yankee manufactures, for everything on him, from the hat on. his head to the covering on his feet, all, were Yaukee. At home, from the humble cottage of the poor man to the costly mansion of the rich planter, every article for use or ornament was of with which he shaved-the chair upon which he fork which he used, and the condiments with which he seasoned his food, were all supplied by Yankees. The very vegetables and flowers which grew in his garden sprung from Yadkee Seed. The poor man drank twenty cent Yankee "vot gut," which killed him by inches, while the rich man got muddled upon the clarified juice of the apple orchards of New Jersey, for which he paid five dollars per bottle, under the name of champagne. If Yankee quacks were to be believed, it was the height of folly for a Southerner ever to die, for a twenty-five cent box of pills or a dollar bottle of some wonderful extract" would rescue him from the very jaws of death; and to convince the incredulous the most marvellous cures were certified to by Northern clergymen and prominent public men! Even when a Southerner was foolish and obstinate enough to discredit the certificates, reject the Yankee nostrams and allow himself to die, secundem artum under the care of the regular faculty, he did not escape Yankee taxation by leaving this world, for his lifeless remains were enclosed in a Yankee patent metalic coffin, to await the blast of Gabriel's trumpet.

Sick and well, living and dead, the Southerner never escaped Brother Jonathan's clutches. In every state of existence Yankee ingenuity made an "honest penny" by him. Everything around him was Yankee, nothing was Southern save the soul he received from God-the air he breathed and the land he trod upon, and even this last is now forfeited under a Yankee confiscation bill. From this Egyptian bondage we are now escaping.

valor of our gallant army. Never had a nation more just cause for jubilee; but while songs of triumph and gratitude abound throughout the land, let us not forget the terrible price paid for our liberation from Yankee domination; let us ever cherish the memories of the heroic slain, who died on the battle-field that their country should live free end independent.

An extract from the Congressional report on Commerce and navigation, for the year 1859, will give a fair average view of the value of Northern and Southern exports:

Exported by the South, $193,399.618 Exported by the North, 45,305,541

Southern exports exceeded those of the North by upwards of one hundred and forty-eight millions; all of which went to enrich northern merchants, support northern shipping and build northern cities.

A CUBIOSITY .- Our older readers may have seen the following, which we copy from a scrap took. It is a letter written by a young lady, newly married, to an intimate friend. She was obliged to show all the letters she wrote to her expressing her real opinion of married life:

"I cannot be satisfied, my dearest friend, blest as I am in the matrimonial state, unless I pour into your friendly bosom, which has ever beat in unison with mine, the various sensations which now swell with the liveliest emotion of pleasure, my almost bursting heart. I tell you my dear husband is the most amiable of men. I have now been married seven weeks, and have never found the least reason to repent the day that joined us. My husband is a person and manners far from resembling ugly, cross, old, disagreeable and jealous monsters, who think by confining to secure ; a wife it is his maxim to treat as a bosom friend and confidant, and not as a play-thing and menial slave, the woman chosen to be his companion. Neither party, he says, should always obey implicitly; but each yield to the other by turns. An ancient maiden aunt, near seventy, a cheerful, venerable and pleasant old lady, lives in the bouse with us-she is the delight of both young and old; she is civil to all the neighborhood around, generous and charitable to the poor. I believe my husband loves nothing more than he does me; he flatters me more. than the glass, and his intoxication, (for so I must call the excess of his love,) often makes me blush for the unworthiness of its object, and wish I were more deserving of the wan whose name I bear. To say all in one word, my dear -----, and to crown the whole, my former gallant lover is now my indulgent husband, my foudness is returned, and I might have had a Prince, without the felicity I find in him. Adieu; may you be as blest as I am unable to wish that I could be more happy.'

N. B .- The key to the above letter, is to read the first and every alternate line only.
