THE BOYS IN BLUE TO THE BOYS IN GRAY.

BY "PRIVATE MILES O'REILLY," U. S. A. Men who have, in many a battle, Made the bail round either rattle, Keeling over men and cattle, Souls and bullets on the wing; Must this war, its woes expanding, Still be pushed, fresh lives demanding, We like gladiators standing Elbow-bloodied in the ring?

Grape-shot rustling, Lullets singing, Round shot humming, orders tinging, And our torn, loved flags a swinging, Forward in the fiery gales;-Bugles fiercely, sharply sounding, Sheets of flame the sight confounding, And o'er all, the heavy pounding

Of the red artillery flails! Brethren, thus we stand confronted, Every bayonet forward slanted, Tired and bloody, but undaunted-Shall the work again begin? Shall the cry again be slaughter, Your blood, our blood, shed like water-Pitiless and useless slaughter,

In a fight ye cannot win? Curse the symbols that divide us, Folly and fraud alone divide us, Brethren, join us-stand beside us-Both have wrongs to wipe away; All our feuds forgotten, ended. Let our flag, with forces blended, Henceforth bear imperial sway!

RATTLESNAKE BITE. - The Grant county (Illinois) Herald relates that a man named Lyon was bitten three times on the foot by a rattlesnake while binding grain, and fell to the ground. He was carried to the house, drank half a pint of GOODS, consisting of alcohol and camphor, then a quart of whiskey, Calicoes, DeLanes, Poplins, Alpaccas, and then a quart of pure alcohol, feeling no symptoms of intoxication. The next morning he felt some numbness and pain in his limb and drank another pint of alcohol, then swallowed a Ready-Made Clothing, quarter of a pound of fine-cut chewing tobacco boiled in sweet milk. These doses, which it would be supposed would kill anybody, had no bites he felt well enough, only a little soreness mention. from the knee down.

[That man was, indeed, badly snakebitten.]
