Anecdote of Thos. F. Marshall

The Hon. Thomas F. Marshall, of Kentucky once a prince of good fellows, was defending a man charged with murder in Jessamine county. Judge Lusk presiding. The testimony against the prisoner was strong, and Tom struggled hard on the cross examination, but to little purpose, for the old Judge was inflexible in his determination to rule out all improper testimony offered on the part of the defence. At last Tom worked himself into a high state of excitement. and remarked that "Jesus Christ was convicted upon just such rulings of the court that tried

"Clerk," said the Judge, "enter a fine of ten

"Well, this is the first time I ever heard anybody being fined for abusing Pontius Pilate,' was the quick response of Tom Here the Judge became very indignant, and ordered the clerk to enter another fine of twenty Torn arese with that peculiar, mirth-provoking expression that no one can imitate, and addressstances would permit, as follows : "If your Honor pleases, as a good citizen, I feel so many moneyed men think there is money in bound to obey the order of this court, and ininvestments here and are ready and willing to tend to do so in this instance; but as I don't income money, expecting to make more by it. This was a stumper. The Judge looked at Tom, and then at the clerk, and finally said: "Clerk, remit Mr Marshall's fines; the State is better able to lose thirty dollars than I am.'

There are preachers of our acquaintance who on announcing their texts from the authorized version of the Scriptures, proceed to inform the audience how the texts by a new translation may be improved. We do not say that they do original Hebrewland Greek, though appearances justify such a suspicion. But we'do say that the custom, whatever be the motive, is 'more honored in the breach than in the observance." for there is no absolute necessity for it, and its tendency is to shake the confidence of their hearers in the accuracy of the authorized ver-Merines, Alpacens, DeLaines, and all Winter Dress sion. Observes Prof. Moses Stuart: -- When I Goods, Broad Cloths, Tricots, Cassimeres, Satinetts, began my clinistry I used to find many texts &c., Flannels of all descriptions, Clasks and Shawls where I thought I could improve the reading, and so altered King James. Some fifteen years later, I found less occasion to alter, and now at the end of thirty years study I can only admire the excellence of our common version, and seldom attempt to improve a verse.

them, others will not. Remember, God's eye is Experience and time convince him of his err in every company. Beware of levity and familjarity with young men; a modest reserve, without affectation, is the only safe path. Court and encourage conversation with those who are truly serious and conversable; do not go into valuable company without endeavoring to improve by the intercourse permitted to you. The Bully Swing.

The Grecian Bend has gone out of vogue tirely; we hope never to be revived. Also, the enormous crinolines have vanished, and a much more becoming style has taken their placedress far neater, more natural and convenient There is also no telling the superior effect pro duced by a good walk, when the fair wearer is properly caparisoned in a dress of the present

To specify the many ways it sets off the person is almost superfluors. In the first place the young lady walks firmly along - that is presuming she has a good understanding. This gives a great advantage over any other dress that has prevailed for the last few years, during which the charming creature has been dragging slowly along a street-sweeper, gathering all the filth o the sidewalks in her track; or environed by hoops of steel, she has never been able to step three feet without knocking against something or somebody. We are heartily rejoiced that these old fashions have gone the way of all nonsense-would that all the other follies of the past could be as easily disposed of as streetsweepers and crinolines.

But look now at one of these lovely daughters of Eve about eighteen - none of your sixteens ed the court with as much gravity as circumfor us !- look at her, we say, as nicely and tightly accounted in the new mode she trips along the street! Isn't she a goddess? Well, to our eyes at least, the statue that enchants the world is not half so glorious. See how free and upincumbered she is as she puts down each high instep-as if she means something every time she steps. And then how unshackled is that whirl she gives her body as she lifts each foot! Oh, that is a bully swing !- it makes us feel young again to behold it with old eyes! He can have no life in his soul-must be a twenty-four-carat dolt, that is not transported in rapture when he gazes on a lovely form as it describes this curve of many curvatures, more complex than can be comprehended in any mathematical formula, but which nevertheless goes right straight to the soul! Oh-crickee!!!

Talk about your mincing Grecian bend, with ts kangaroo paws and its kildee gaiters! Talk about your majestic strut with five vards of silk railing in the mud!-but give us the present style so trim and so trig, that gives freedom of action to the loveliest of God's creatures, and enables them to step as nature intended, to put down the foot with a vim, to exhibit all the poetry of motion, and, above all, that leaves every muscle free to enrapture the gazer with the bully swing!

WISDOM INCREASES WITH AGE .- The great ohn Wesley once gave expression to the following sentiment: "When I was young I was sure of everything; in a few years, having been mistaken a thousand times, I was not half as sure of most things as I was before. At present, I am hardly sure of anything but, what God has revealed to man." And thus age and experience brings to us wisdom. The fool thinks that he knows everything; the wise man is sensible that his knowledge is as nothing to that which he is yet to learn. The young man, fresh from his books, with little knowledge of men. but not dull. Be communicative, but not for-ward. Be kind, not servile. Beware of sillys sufficiency and conceit, is wiser than the wise than he at first supposed, and when age is fact upon hits, with the recollection of a past career of felly and thousands of mistakes, he is fully prepared to adopt the sontiment of Wesley. And thus from time and experience do we gain knowledge. Regard them not lightly, oh youth

We suppose there is no reasonable doub that the Christians festival is only a quisi andiversary of the Saviour's nativity, and that it was primarily a heathen observance put under nomihally Christian auspices.
