Not long since a man stood in a Wall street bank with a bag in his hand containing $10,000 in gold. A gentlemanly looking man, with his hat off, said to the one who held the gold : "Let me heft it-I'll guess within an ounce of its The person addressed mechanically handed the bag to the applicant, who at once ran out of doors, and was soon lost in the crowd, while the loser never saw it again. On seeing his hat off he thought him a clerk in the bank. A gentleman standing by saw the thief remove his hat and hang it on a hook, when he, too, supposed it to be some one connected with the bank, and said nothing. Some years since a person entered the Ima pen behind his ear, and then walked deliberately past clerks, and tellers, and cashier, and pushing the president aside, who stood talking with some of the directors, entered the vault, and helped himself to the largest package of money he could find, and walked out unmolested, no one suspecting that anything was wrong till he was off and out of sight.

man rang the bell and inquired for the man that lived there, but he was down town. He said the hearse contained a coffin, in which were the remains of the daughter of the occupant of the house, who had just died at school in Connecticut. The servants at the house had heard nothing of the matter, but helped the driver to bring the coffin into a parlor, and at a suggestion of the young man, who said he was a teacher, sent one of their number to the gentleman's place of business to inform him of the sad news. The teacher remained in the house to tell the particulars, but when the man arrived the teacher had gone, and about $3,000 worth of jewelry, kept in bureau caskets, had gone with him. The coffin was opened, and found to be filled with a beach

Beecher on Early Marriage.

. At no period, perhaps, in their life, do young men need the inspiration of virtuous love and the sympathy of a companion in their self-denying toil as when they first enter the battle for their own support Early marriages are permanent moralities, and deferred marriages are temptations to wickedness. And yet every year it becomes more and more difficult, concurrent with the reigning ideas of society, for a young man to enter upon that matrimonial state which is the proper guard of their virtue, as well as their courage and enterprise. The battle of life is almost at the beginning. There it is that a man needs wedlock. But a wicked and ridiculous public sentiment puts a man who is in society, or out of society, for that matter, largely on the ground of condition, and not of disposition and character. The man that has means wherewith he can visibly live amply is in good society, as a general rule. The man that has virtue and storn manliness, but has nothing withal external to show, is not usually considered in good society. Ambitious young men will not therefore marry until they can meet their expenses; but that is deferring for years and years the indispensable cheaper than one! and young men are under bad influences who, when in the very morning of life, and better fitted than at any later period to grow together with one-who is their equal permanent lameness. The greatest eare, it is virtue. Society is bad where two cannot live bered with harness, and possibly with a load too and mate, are debarred from marrying through scores of years, from mere prudential considerations; and the heart and the life are sacrificed to the pocket. They are tempted to substitute ambition for love, when at last, over the ashes and expiring embers of their early romance, they select their wife.

Laming Horses. The horse is one of the most powerful, ambitious and sensible of domestic animals, and yet, in a certain sense, is far from being a hardy one. In this respect the horse is not equal to the rough and tumble usage which the mule or even the ox can bear without exhibiting marked signs of the severe discipline to which they have been subjected: In reviewing the many horses daily thronging the streets of the larger towns and cities, the number of defective ones can scarcely fail of being remarked. Some are ailing in the fore limbs, others in the hind ones, and not a few in both. This is not necessarily the result of age, defective blood, nor of special hard work, though in some instances it may be so, but much oftener is the consequence of careless handling or positive cruelty on the part of those to whom they are entrusted. As has been already intimated, the horse, in a certain sense, is a delicate animal, and if pounced upon in a passion while encumtrue, cannot prevent accidents to horses, in all cases, but with proper attention the number of the halting ones would constitute the exception, and not the rule, as is now too often the case.

Summer Americans in Europe.

As the advent of summer marks the flight of the wedding. You have adjourned the most so that all these classes, heluding guides, relic red-nosed hostlers, will have reason to bless the prosperity of America and give hearty welcome to the roving part of the American nation. After all, this exedus to Europe is only a proper return for what Europe sends to us in the shape of amigration. The difference is that we send money to Europe to be lavishly squan-dered in a princely fashion, while she sends to us industry, capital and muscle, which we mean to use as permanent wealth for the development of our resources and to keep here for all time
