CHINESE TESTIMONY NOT RELIABLE.—The California courts find it almost impossible to get along with their Chinese brethren, their word being "as good as their bond," and their bond no better than their word, which is worthless. The other day a Chinaman made a deadly assault on some of his countrymen, and was held to bail under $1,000 bond, some of his friends went his bail, taking oath to their being worth more than that amount, and after it was too late to secure the criminal it was proven that they were not worth a cent. They seem to have no regard for their oaths. Perhaps time and education will teach them better .- Exchange.

An Example.

Many a boy now in poverty, is anxious to gain wealth, honor, and fame. Certainly all cannot will attain to eminence, and it is well worth try-Vanderbilt is an example of the kind. He commenced as poor as any boy, he rose by his own little sloop, and beat the man who tried to run him out. As he grew in years and knowledge, he owned a large line and succeeded with steamboats when others failed. Then he took to railroading, and what he did, he did with a will and succeeded, because he was determined to succeed, and bent all his energies to that end, and to-day he stands foremost among the great successful monied men of the great metropolis Energy, perseverance, tack has done it. He begun poor, he had no rich relatives to fall back tion. on. He made up his mind to succeed and did it; others can do the same thing if they will.

A Lesson for Well Dispossed Wives.

"Why is it," asked a lady, "that so many men are anxious to get rid of their wives?" "Because," was the reply, "so few women exert themselves after marriage to make their presence indispensible to the happiness of their husbands." When husband and wife become thoroughly accustomed to each other-when all the little battery of charms which both played so skillfully before the wedding day has been exhaustedtoo many seem to think that nothing remains but the clanking of the legal chains which bind them to each other. The wife seeks to develop in her affection no new attraction for her husband, and the latter, perceiving the lupsus, benot exist into insurpassable obstacles, in the way of his earthly felicity. This is the true secret. The woman who charmed before marriage can charm afterwards-if she will, though not, of course, by the same means. There are a thousand ways, if she will only study them out, in which she can make home so attractive that her husband will unconsciously dislike to absent himself from it, and so she can readily make herself the particular deity of the domestic paradise This done, she may quietly laugh at all attempts to alienate her husband's inclinations, and with these inclinations, will always go, in such cases, his active judgment.

The Philadelphia Ledger relates that this operation, which consists in the actual transfer of the blood of one living body into the veins of another, has been recently performed in the

"A young man in the upper part of the city was wounded on the inner surface of the upper lip, by tripping and falling on the fragments of a pitcher which he had been carrying in his hand. The wound continued to bleed for ten days, after which time the patient was sent to the surgical wards of the hospital, which were, at the time, under the charge of Dr. T. G. Morton. Several remedies were then applied, and the arteries supplying the face were tied, but without success in controlling the flow of blood. Recourse was next had to cutting down to the There was no party movement in it; it was common carotid or great artery of the neck, and merely a measure to protect the State, and all applying a ligature, so as to obstruct entirely the course of the blood in it. . This was done on the 18th of October last. The oozing of blood still continued, but in lessened quantity. On the following day, or the 19th, the patient was in such a state of extreme exhaustion from the long-continued hemorrhage that his death seemed to be imminent, and, as a last resource, Dr. Morton resolved to try the effect of transfusion. We shall not pretend to describe the apparatus used on the occasion, or the details of the operation. Let it suffice for us to say that two medical students bared their arms and gave the blood required for the occasion. Five ounces and a half of their blood were infused into the vein of each arm of the patient, the marked good effects of which were evinced in five minutes by a rallying of the pulse and otherwise beginning reaction. There was no further discharge of Y.E.As. - Messrs. Argo, Armstrong, Ashworth, blood from the original wound, and in ten days

Whatever may be the termination of this case. regarded as one of a wound with complicated symptoms, there can be no question of the entire success of the operation of transfusion, and of its saving life and restoring the patient for a while at least, to the exercise of his ordinary functions. Transfusion was first practiced in the early part of the seventeenth century, although its use in England and on the continent generally, dates from the middle of this century. The first operations were on animals, and the first instance Crawford, Eagles, Ellington.
