THE BARBER'S POLE.—Hundreds of people there are who do not understand why the barber uses the red-striped pole. It originated from the fact that some centuries ago it was customary for barbers to bleed people, and the pole, with alternate winding stripes of white and red, represented the bandage of that phlebotomized victim. In the course of time the apothecary excelled the barber as a blood-letting; but the old sign of the craft was retained by the latter after the function which gave it significance had ceased.

Great Discovery in OIL! OIL!!
The undersigned, a practical manufacturer, has for the past 12 years been experimenting with and compounding LUBRICATING OIL. He has lately made a new and important discovery in the laws governing fatty substances, such as OILS, whereby the gummy matter can be detached from the Oil and precipitated to the bottom, leaving a perfectly pure Oil fit for LUBRICATING PURPOSES. He has applied this discovery to Oils intended for machinery, and produced an OIL WARRANTED not to heat or gum, and as durable as the best of Sperm. The best judges cannot tell it from pure sperm either by taste or smell.
Warranted to give satisfaction or returned at my expense.
Refer to L. C. Jones, President Fayetteville & Cold Springs Railroad, Fayetteville, N. C.; Jno. Shaw, President Beaver Creek Manufacturing Company, Fayetteville, N. C.; Col. J. W. Leak, President Great Falls Manufacturing Company, Rockingham, N. C.

Watching and Waiting.
I sought thee in the silent room,
And spoke aloud, and called thy name,
And thought I heard thee, in the gloom,
Say softly, "Art thou still the same?"
But 'twas my anxious heart believed
The echo's voice to be thine own;
Too soon, alas! 'twas undeceived—
Its hope crushed down, its joy o'erthrown,
Its love a stricken, blighted thing,
Just on the borders of life's spring.

Long hours I watched, and waited thee,
And knew to look was all in vain;
How did my soul's fierce agony
Knock all my being with its pain!
The moon shone through the casement bright;
The winds passed on with a sigh,
When with them came a holy light,
And Memory stood in radiance by,
Bearing her wealth of gems and gold—
Remembrance of the joys of old.

Love may not ever linger thus,
O'er pleasures that are passed away—
So, in my heart, I felt for us
There yet would dawn some blissful day—
Some glowing morn, when we should be
No longer shrouded in this gloom;
When grief is fled, and we shall see
Love's glad effulgence in its room,
When every hope shall radiant shine,
And I be thine, and thou be mine!

An illustration of the statesmanship that shapes the destinies of some of the States is found in South Carolina. In the Legislature of that State there were fifty negroes and thirteen whites; of the former only thirty-two can read and right; but nineteen pay taxes; and the sum total of the amount paid in by them to the support of the government amounts to the enormous sum of $146.10 per annum.

Vitality of the Human Species.
The first six months of a child's life is too uncertain to base any calculations upon. On the other hand, after the expiration of the first year, the chances are even that the child will live to the age of thirty-three; between ten and fifteen years of age life is most secure, and the probabilities are even that it will live forty-three years longer.
Of a million of people, 573,460 will be found to be between the ages of fifteen and sixty; and as nearly one-half of them are men, this number of inhabitants could, on an emergency, furnish 250,000 men capable of bearing arms, even if an allowance be made for the sick, the lame, etc., who may be supposed to be among that number. This will explain the capacity of such countries as the United States and Prussia, where the volunteer and militia system is so fully developed, for putting such vast numbers of fighting men in the field when necessary has required them.

It has been proved that the number of males that are born exceeds that of the females; this is a striking instance of the wisdom of Providence, which has thus provided for the preservation of the human race. Men, in consequence of the active life for which they are naturally destined by their strength and courage, are exposed to more dangers than the female sex; war, long sea voyages, employments laborious or prejudicial to health, and dissipation, carry off great numbers of the males; and it therefore results, that if the number of the latter born did not exceed that of the females, the males would rapidly decrease and soon become extinct.

What Real Love Is.
Many women suppose they love their husbands, when, unfortunately, they have not the beginning of an idea what love is. Loving to be admired by a man, loving to be petted by him, and loving to be praised by him, is not loving him. All these may be, when a man has no power of loving at all; they may be, simply because she loves to be flattered, praised, caressed, coaxed, as a cat likes to be coaxed and stroked, and fed with cream, and have a warm corner.
But all this is not love. It may exist, to be sure, where there is love; it generally does. But it may also exist where there is no love. Love is self sacrifice; it is a life out of self and in another. Its very essence is the preferring to the comfort, the ease, the wishes of another to one's own for the love we bear them. Love is giving and not receiving. Love is not a sheet of blotting paper or a sponge sucking in everything to itself; it is an out-springing fountain, giving from itself. Love's motto has been dropped in this world as a chance gem of great price, by the lovediest, and fairest, the purest, the strongest of Lovers that ever trod this mortal earth, of whom it is recorded that He said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Now, in love, there are ten receivers to one giver. There are ten persons in this world who like to be loved, and love, where there is one who knows how to love. That is a more noble attainment than your French, and music and dancing. You may lose the very power of it by smothering it under a load of early self-indulgence. By living just as you are all wanting to live—living to be petted, to be flattered, to be admired, to be praised, to have your own way, and to do only that which is easy and agreeable—you may lose the power of self-denial and self-sacrifice; you may lose the power of loving nobly and worthily, and become a mere sheet of blotting paper all your life.

A Northern View of Charlotte and Mecklenburg County.
The Editor of the Pittsburg Presbyterian Banner, who, it seems, recently visited Charlotte, publishes a letter in his paper from which we extract the following. The statements are not entirely correct, but about as accurate as a stranger could make them:
MECKLENBURG COUNTY, N. C.
Charlotte is the County Seat of Mecklenburg county, which is one of the most celebrated spots in the entire South. It was originally settled by Scotch Irish Presbyterians, mostly from Central Pennsylvania. And the prevalence of the names of Johnson, Graham, Scott, Alexander and Allison, shows that the old inhabitants did not pass away without leaving numerous descendants to take their places. They were famous for intelligence, patriotism and devotion to the Presbyterian Church. At a very early day "Queen's College," where many lawyers and ministers of the Gospel received their academic training, was established. This is said to have been the first institution of learning incorporated south of the Hudson. It flourished for many years, but its doors were closed at the beginning of the Revolutionary War, and were never opened again. The place where it stood is still pointed out by the people, who are proud of its memory, but sad because it no longer lives. In this County, a short distance from Charlotte, two Presidents of the United States were born—Andrew Jackson and James K. Polk. The South Carolina line is only twelve miles distant from Charlotte; and there has been considerable controversy whether Andrew Jackson was born in North or South Carolina.

The truth seems to be, that while the family was on its way removing from North to South Carolina, the future President was born. His entire education was received from the pastor of Sugar Creek Presbyterian church, some three miles distant, and he opened his first law office at Salisbury, about forty-three miles from this place.

The most memorable thing in connection with the history of this County is the "Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence," which was adopted May 20, 1775, in an old, round log and clapboard covered school-house, used as a court room, amid most enthusiastic shouts. The humble building in which this great transaction took place stood within a few feet of where these notes are written. Attached to this document are the names of seven Alexanders, many of whose grandchildren and great grandchildren still reside here. This was the first public action taken which looked to a complete separation of the Colonies from Great Britain, and the establishment of American Independence. The paper was taken to Philadelphia by Captain Jack, and placed in the hands of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, to be presented to the Colonial Congress; but these gentlemen replied that it was too soon for such a movement. This was more than one year before Mr. Jefferson wrote the "Declaration" adopted on the 4th of July, 1776. The agreement in sentiment and the similarity of a number of passages, prove that Mr. Jefferson had not read and studied the "Mecklenburg Declaration" in vain.

This region was strongly opposed to secession; but after the war broke out, the people became earnest, active and violent supporters of rebellion. This sudden change was effected in a few days, if not hours. Ex-Governor Vance started out on a tour to make addresses in opposition to secession, and delivered the first half in favor of Union, and the other half on the other side. Indeed a gentleman in Charlotte told us that it was reported that Mr. Vance began a speech on the side of Union, and ended in favor of disunion. The jolly and witty Ex-Governor, in presenting his claims to admission to Congress, urged persistently his Union speeches made just before the outbreak of the rebellion, but shrewdly refrained to mention those made on the other side immediately afterwards. He lives in Charlotte, is highly respected, and his admission to Congress is greatly desired by the people. We could learn of no one here who had been a persistent Union man throughout the war, and we suspect that it is difficult to find many such anywhere within the bounds of the Seceded States, except probably in some mountainous districts or in very retired places.

Death in the Pulpit.
The Rev. Benjamin Eaton, first and only rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Galveston, Texas, was stricken with death while standing in his pulpit on Sunday week. The Galveston News thus describes the affecting scene:
"He ascended the pulpit announcing his text, 'There is yet room,' all trembling beneath the weight of his last message, he referred to one after another of the friends of his youth and the communicants of his church that had gone before. He painted death entering the church door, passing up the broad aisle laying his bony hand to the right and to the left; breathing his cold, clammy breath on the cheek of beauty, and waiting the silver hairs of age. Now touching the father, then the son, here the mother, here the daughter. As the specter so plain to his entranced vision advanced to the chancel-rail, and as he saw that his time had come his words struggled for utterance. He faltered. His weakened limbs staggering. A gentleman who advanced to his assistance was waved back. For ten minutes more he spoke; his words only audible to those near him. The excitement of the audience was fearful. Three times he struggled to continue saying: 'I am very sick but I must say.' Again he staggered. He fell into the arms of Mr. C. R. Hughes as he raised his hands to pronounce the benediction. Like Moses, to hold up his hands which were too weak to hold up his hands which was done by Mr. Hughes, as he said his last pulpit words, 'To God the Father.' His tongue refused to speak further; his hands dropped. He was carried to his rectory, where he died."

SAVAGE.—In an article from the National Standard, over the signature of Wendell Phillips, we find the following amiable allusions to the people of the South:
"Nothing short of shooting half a dozen Southern millionaires at the drum-head will awe the Ku-Klux into submission. To prevent the choice of a Democratic President may be impossible. But our effort must go deeper than that. We must begin to educate the people into the determination that, if encouraged by a rebel President, secession ever lifts its head again at the South, the North will sweep rebellion with the besom of utter destruction and leave it no ruler but the sword until every now living white man is in his grave."

We are at a loss to imagine why the blood-thirsty Mr. Phillips should select Southern millionaires especially as objects of his wrath. If the ku-klux organizations are composed exclusively of such individuals, it is impossible that they can be very formidable; in fact, such a suggestion would be quite a conclusive argument against the existence of such organizations at all; for Southern millionaires are lamentably scarce. We agree with Mr. Phillips as to the possible improbability of preventing the election of a Democratic President. On the subject of secession, Mr. Phillips is exasperating himself irrelevantly. The old gentleman is nervous. He needs a sedative. Secession will never "lift its head again at the South." It has been dead and buried for nearly six years now; and its ghost disturbs nobody but Mr. Phillips. That "besom of utter destruction" with which we are threatened in an imaginary emergency is enough to secure the gentle Wendell from being farther haunted by the ghost. We fear his digestion is not good. —Norfolk Journal.
