"Nothing to do!" in this world of ours, Where weeds grow up with the fairest flowers, Where smiles have only a fitful play, Where bearts are breaking every day?

"Nothing to do!" thou Christian soul, Wrapping thee round in thy selfish stole? Off with the garments of sloth and sin, Christ, thy Lord, bath a kingdom to win.

"Nothing to do!" There are prayers to lay On the altar of incense, day by day; There are foes to meet within and without,

There is error to conquer, strong and stout. "Nothing to do!" There are minds to teach The simplest form of Christian speech; There are hearts to lure with loving wile, From the grimest baunts of sin's defile.

A lady and gentleman residing in A ken, S. C., own a pair of ponies, also spaniel. Last year, as their custom is hey sent these animals out of the town bout three miles distant, to their farm, to remain during their absence through he summer. When they returned in the fall they traveled home on horse-back, and having these horses at their town home did not send for the ponies at once. The dog came in from the farm, however, This was on Friday. The dog showed himself very uneasy and dissatisfied with something, and the lady observed him carefully. She came to the conclusion that he did not like the new horses (which were two bays), and remarked upon it to Mr R--. On the following Sunday morning the dog disappeared, and had not returned in the afternoon when they went to drive with the bays. After an absence of an hour or two they returned, and found standing at the gate, the dog with the two ponies. He had evidently trotted out to the farm, and informed the ponies that their place was taken by strangers. and this was the result .- Our Dumb

The following is from the New Orleans Times-Democrat: "I was loafing around the streets last night," said Jim Nelson, one of the oldest locomolive engineers running into New Orleans, "and as I had nothing to do I dropped into a concert and heard a slick-looking Frenchman play a piano in a way that made me feel all over in spots. As soon as he sat down on the stool I knew by the way he handled himself that he understood the machine he was running. He tapped the keys way up on one end, just as if they were gauges and he wanted to see if he had water enough. Then he looked up as if he wanted to know how much steam he was carryopen the throttle and sailed out on the main line as if he was half an hour late. "You could hear her thunder over culverts and bridges, and getting faster and faster, until the fellow rocked about in his seat like a cradle. Somehow I thought t was old '36' pulling a passenger train and getting out of the way of a 'special.' The fellow worked the keys on the middle division like lightning, and then he fell along the North end of the line until the drivers went around like a buzz saw, and got excited. About the time I was fixing to tell him to cut her off a little, he kicked the dampers under the machine wide open, pulled the throttle away back in the tender, and, Jerusalem jumpers! how he did run. I couldn't stand it any longer, and yelled to him that she was pounding' on the left side, and if he wasn't careful he'd drop his ash pan. "But he didn't hear. No one heard me. Everything was flying and whizzing. Telegraph poles on the side of the track looked like a row of cornstalks, the trees appeared to be a mud bank, and all the time the exhaust of the old machine sounded slipped an eccentric, blew out his soft plug. went down grades fifty feet to the mile, and not a confounded brake set. She went by the meeting point at a mile and a half a minute, and calling for more steam. My hair stood up like a cat's tail, because I knew the game was up. "Sure enough, dead ahead of us was the headlight of the 'special.' In a daze I heard the crash as they struck, and I saw cars shivered into atoms, people mashed and mangled and bleeding, and gasping for water. I heard another crash as the French professor struck the deep keys away down on the lower end of the southern division, and then I came to my senses. There he was at a dead standstill, with the door of the fire-box of the machine open, wiping the perspiration off his face child knows anything about the process of and bowing to the people before him. If in our last expressed thoughts, but it is which, as the Governor was a prisoner, brewing and the ancient "baking day" I live to be a thousand years old, I'll never

Peter Cooper, the eminent business man and philanthropist, who has just gone to his reward, had in life a great many admirers and in death a great many eulogist. There is one feature about his life that cannot be too strongly emphasized, or too highly commended, or too universally imitated. He never carried in his pocket a dollar dishonestly acquired. Rev Mr Collyer said of him, in his funeral address: "Here lies a man who never owned a dollar that he could not take up to the great white throne." His great success in business was not secured at the expense of tricks and business wrongs. He never pursued a morally unlawful business in a morally unlawful way. He had talent, skill, and energy that made him a man of great efficiency; but no talent or skill for cheating. His power of action was under the stern government of a pure conscience and this made him an honest man .-The tricks of trade he knew nothing about. He was not one of the "successful knaves' who gather vast fortunes by virtually robbing others, and then spend those fortunes in selfish indulgence, indifferent alike to the wants of the world and the claims of God. He owned by an honest title every dollar that he held. We do not believe that any man ever thought that Peter Cooper ever took from him a penny to which he was not thus entitled. We commend his example in this respect to all young men and to all business men, This would be a much better and a much happier world if all men carried into the walks of business life the sterling honesty which marked the character of Peter Cooper. It is not true that a man cannot sucueed in business on this principal. If it were true, it would be better to fail than to succeed; but it is not true, and the life of Peter Cooper conspicuous-
