From the Franklin (Tenn.) Review.

THE WHIG PARTY OF TENNESSEE—ITS POSITION.

From recent indications at Washington there is reason to apprehend that there may be a division of the Whig party of the United States upon the subject of the finality of the Compromise.

The split in the late Whig caucus at the Federal city has given rise to these apprehensions; and it must be confessed that that split looks ominous of such a division in the approaching Presidential election; but at our distances from the scene of action, and from the meagre and necessarily ex parte statement of the case that we have seen, we do not feel warranted in pronouncing judgment upon the matter.

Of one thing we feel perfectly sure, and that is, that if the action of that caucus is a foreshadowing of the action of the National Whig Convention, the Whig party in Tennessee is not prepared and cannot be prepared to support its nominee. Tennessee will, in that event, it seems to us, be placed in a position of armed neutrality, and hold themselves ready to pour a galling fire into either, or both parties, as they may present unwelcome or hostile fronts.

The Whig party of Tennessee in February last met in convention at Nashville, and expressed a unanimous opinion in favor of our patriotic and noble Chief Magistrate, Millard Fillmore, and our talented, eloquent, and efficient Senator, James C. Jones, for President and Vice President. That was no idle and unmeaning compliment; but was intended for sober earnestness. These names would carry Tennessee, beyond a peradventure. It may be that other names might carry the vote of the State, but if so, those other names must be as unmistakably identified with the Compromise, as a final panacea of the questions to which they relate, as those of Fillmore and Jones.

The State Convention which nominated those distinguished gentlemen for the high positions to which they are respectively named, laid down the platform upon which they demand that the nominees of the Whig party shall stand. That platform will be found comprised in the following resolution adopted by our Whig State Convention:

"Resolved, That we have an abiding confidence that the Whig National Convention will nominate candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency who are sound on the Union and Compromise measures, and in favor of maintaining their finality in principle and substance; and we therefore appoint delegates to said convention to aid in making said nomination."

Upon that platform, and no other, we, and the Whig party of Tennessee and the South, are prepared to stand to do battle, if we must, to the death.

It will be seen that it was only because our State Convention had "an abiding confidence that the National Whig Convention will nominate candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency who are sound on the Union and Compromise measures, and in favor of maintaining their finality in principle and substance," that they appointed delegates to meet in convention to make such nominations.

If the just and reasonable expectations of the Whig party of Tennessee—amongst whom there is, and will be, no division on this question—are disappointed, and if the National Convention shall nominate men who are not distinctly known to be in favor of those measures, then it is clear that they will feel themselves absolved from all obligations to support the nominees of that convention.

For our single self, we would infinitely prefer to run Fillmore and Jones, with a certainty of defeat, than to run any others, who are not known to be for the Compromise, even with a certainty of success.

"Live or die, sink or swim, survive or perish," the Whig party of Tennessee and of the South will be content with nothing short of the unqualified endorsement of the Compromise. To this complexion it must and will come; and the sooner that important fact is known abroad, the better it will be for the unity of the Whig party and the prosperity of the country.

☞ A speech containing various matters of general interest was made by the Earl of Derby, the British Prime Minister at a banquet given by the Lord Mayor of London on the 8th ult. We quote from it the following passages:

"Among the many gratifying circumstances connected with this assembly, not the least is to see so large, and I may add so fair a representation of those foreign States which are now happily in amity with this country, and to maintain the most cordial relations of amity and friendship is the avowed policy of the present Government, as it ought to be the policy of every Government, of this country. (Cheers.) We accept the presence of these representatives on this occasion, not as a compliment, however gratifying that might be, to me or any of my colleagues in our personal and individual character. We accept it as a mark of adhesion to that policy which professes an absolute and entire non-intervention with the internal affairs of all other countries, and the determination also to leave unexhausted no effort—if the case should arise—by friendly exertion and by friendly interposition, to prevent the possibility of the disturbance, in any quarter of the world, of the general peace which now exists. ('Hear,' and cheers.) My Lord, it may be that in various portions of the world there are elements of internal discord, and elements which may threaten the spreading of that discord beyond their own boundaries, which may defeat the best intentions of the most peaceful States. I do not believe—I do not venture to hope—that we have arrived at that Utopian period when any nation can safely or justifiably deprive itself of the means of internal organization for its own national defence (cheers;) but this I do believe, and this I am confident—that throughout Europe and throughout the world there is a general desire on the part of all nations to extinguish at once the slightest spark which may appear to threaten external conflagration, or to endanger the general peace. (Loud cheers.) Of this I am sure—that if there be an appearance of hostility or of angry feelings arising in any quarter, the exertions of all countries will be used, not, as in less enlightened times, to fan the flame, in the hope of obtaining some remote and individual advantage, but to put a friendly extinguisher upon the first elements of strife, and to interpose for the prevention of misunderstandings which may at any time arise; and I am quite confident that, without provocation, any one Power, either through the misconduct of its own Government, or through the pressure of its own people, should be so unwise as to make a hostile or unprovoked aggression, that Power would be met by the unanimous reprobation and remonstrance of the civilized world. (Loud cheers.) I am confident, also, that there is an enlightened feeling arising now among all governments and among all nations—that there is a growing conviction that their interests, their honor, their welfare, and their real glory are better promoted by developing their internal resources, by fostering the domestic industry of their people, by promoting the enjoyment, the wealth, and the prosperity of their subjects, than by any dreams of military glory, however brilliant, or by any prospect of aggressive conquests, however dazzling. ('Hear,' and cheers.) At this moment, I may mention as an illustration, that we are engaged with a great and powerful neighbor, whose military prowess all the world acknowledges, and of whose prowess we have ourselves had great experience, (hear, hear,) not in those hostile armaments which have formerly deluged the world in blood—but we are engaged in a united effort, by united councils, in endeavoring by peaceful negotiations to extend, not for our own individual benefit, but for the benefit of the world at large, the sphere of peaceful commerce through the interior of the vast continent of America; and in this peaceful labor our councils are undivided. (Hear, hear.) Our plenipotentiaries are, indeed, different in person, but the instructions upon which they proceed, and spirit by which they are animated, are essentially and unequivocally the same.—(Cheers.) I feel, my Lord, that for all the world—for the promotion of peace and for the general good of the world—the cordial union of all nations in the advancement of commercial intercourse is a matter of primary importance; but, if it be so to other nations, most of all must it be so to this, with whom the great manufacturing and commercial power is so large an element of that greatness which a long series of years has enabled us to attain.

* * * I know the difficulties which in this and in any country attend the faithful discharge of public duties, but I am convinced that no Ministry is worthy of the confidence of this country which does not act for itself and upon its own convictions, and trust that the sincerity of those convictions will in the long run force themselves upon the sympathy and support of the people. We may feel that we have an arduous task before us, but we shall not fail from the want of a clear perception of the course which we ought to take, or a clear appreciation of the difficulties we have to encounter. We may fail from causes not within our control; but, my Lord, if we should not fail, and if in any degree we can deserve the confidence and support of this country, it will be our proudest hope, it is our boldest and highest ambition, that when we cease to hold that office with which the favor of the Sovereign and the confidence of the people have entrusted us, we may transmit unimpaired to those who succeed us that glorious inheritance which we have received of the freedom of the British constitution, of the safety, honor and welfare of the sovereign and her dominions," and that we shall leave England as, I trust, we found her—an object of attachment and friendly respect to those nations of the civilized world with whom we desire upon all occasions to maintain the most cordial and amicable relations. (Hear, hear, and loud cheers.)"

A toast to the Navy elicited a response from the Duke of Northumberland, in the course of which he paid the following handsome compliment to the United States:

* * * "Since they had last met in that hospitable hall, the Arctic Expedition fitted out by this country had quitted its shores under the most favorable auspices, and with the most fervent and anxious wishes for its success, not only in this, but in far distant countries. ('Hear,' and cheers.) They never could forget the manner in which the United States fitted out an expedition to assist in the search for Sir John Franklin. (Loud cheers.) He must leave it to his excellent friend the American Minister to express to the people of that country, of which he was so worthy a representative, the sentiments excited, not in this metropolis, but throughout the kingdom, by such generous exertions. (Hear, and cheers.")

DUEL EXTRAORDINARY.

One of the most extraordinary duels which has graced the calender of the "code of honor" for some time past, took place yesterday evening—not, be it known, at the live oaks, or any other fashionable suburban Golgotha, but on Poydras street, opposite Gleese's Row. The combatants, we understand, were Spaniards, the weapons stilletoes, and the distance a fet discretion. By appointment they met about 6 o'clock with their respective friends, and after the usual preliminaries were arranged, they went at it. Both were perfect masters of their weapons, and it was some minutes after the fight commenced before blood was drawn. A crowd soon gathered, and, instead of arresting the parties, they formed a ring, evidently determined on enjoying the fun.—Fortunately, however, a gentleman living opposite, on seeing the crowd, and learning what was going on, rushed into the ring and put an end to the disgraceful scene, at much personal risk, by separating the combatants before either was killed.—N. O. True Delta.

Distressing Times!—290 of the 300 looms in the Reading Cotton Factory are now in operation, turning out an average of six thousand yards of fine muslin per day—or between forty and fifty thousand yards per week. In a few weeks more, every loom in the building will be in motion, when the daily manufacture will average at least 8000 yards. In the two cotton factories at Lancaster, about 900 persons—at least two-thirds of whom are females—are employed. The Harrisburg Cotton Factory is doing a fine business.

ANOTHER SCIENTIFIC WONDER! IMPORTANT TO DYSPEPTICS.—Dr. J. S. Houghton's PEPSIN, The true Digestive Fluid, or Gastric Juice, prepared from RENNET of the FOURTH STOMACH OF THE OX after directions of Baron LIEBIG, the great Physiological Chemist, by J. S. HOUGHTON, M. D., Philadelphia. This is truly a wonderful remedy for INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, JAUNDICE, LIVER COMPLAINT, CONSTIPATION and DEBILITY, acting after Nature's own Method, by Nature's own Agent, the GASTRIC JUICE. Pamphlets, containing Scientific Evidence of its value, furnished by the Agents gratis. See notice among the medical advertisements.

READER! PAUSE!! Have you a pain in the right side, and soreness upon touch, just under the short ribs? Have you inability to lie upon the left side, or if at all able to do so, have you not a dragging sensation produced which seriously afflicts your breathing, causing a troublesome dry cough? Is your tongue coated? Have you an acid stomach, deficiency of perspiration, and sometimes a sympathetic pain in the shoulder (either right or left) with disposition to sleep and general depression of spirits? These are symptoms of Liver Complaint and if not attended to, and promptly checked, will eventually terminate in confirmed Consumption, the most baneful of all diseases. Are you troubled with nausea, loss of Appetite, disgust for food, heart burn, a depraved appetite, sense of fulness or weight in the Stomach, sinking or fluttering in the pit of the Stomach, sour eructations, &c. &c., connected with cold feet, pain in weak nerves through the limbs, swimming of the head, sudden flushes of heat, &c., with an acute Neuralgic pain about the hips very often mistaken for Rheumatism? Have you any yellowness of the skin and eyes? Have you a fluttering at the heart, a sense of choking when lying down, sub weak feeling about the eyes, fever, and dull pain in the head, constant imaginings of evil and great depression of spirits? Is your pulse quick and strong, and your countenance pale and distressed? These are some of the most prominent symptoms of Indigestion and Dyspepsia. If you have any, or most of the foregoing symptoms, you should at once seek relief. All delays are dangerous, but most of all, that which endangers human life. The old adage "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" is most true in its application here. We should at once apply a remedy to the disease. The Wild Cherry Tree Bark possesses a certain, peculiar and specific influence upon the Liver and other important organs of the body, restoring their natural action and thereby establishing that equilibrium in all the functions of the system, which constitutes perfect health. The best, most certain and agreeable form for the administration of this remedy is, SILAS COMFOUND WILD CHERRY TONIC AND ALTERANT, which taken in connection with the Vegetable Anti-bilious Pills will certainly and effectually prevent and cure all cases of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Flatulency, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Nervousness, General Debility, Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, &c. &c., and will also be found highly beneficial in Scrofula, Incipient Consumption, Gout, Rheumatism, Amenorrhœa, Chronic Dysentery, Diarrhœa, &c.

A New Establishment.

IMPROVED

Colored Photographic
LIKENESSES.

THE Subscribers have fitted a suite of rooms for a first class DAGUERREIAN GALLERY, embracing reception and sitting rooms; ladies toilet; operating and chemical apartments; all replete with the necessary furniture; and as it is the first and only Gallery in Western North Carolina, we have spared no pains or expense to make it, in all respects, equal, at least, to the best in the State.

We now, respectfully announce to the citizens of Charlotte and vicinity, our readiness to execute Miniatures and Portraits in the finest styles, and at reasonable prices.

Our reputation is too well known in this State, to require praise better, but would briefly state that our facilities in every respect, as superior Instruments, Chemicals, Stock, &c., a long practice, and all the improvements to the present date, enable us to guarantee Likenesses, in execution and finish, decidedly superior to any now taken in this section, and quite equal to the best brought from the Cities.

Our style of coloring has no equal in the State, and our method of sealing up pictures, exposure and permanently excluding them from dust, &c., is the most effectual mode, and precludes any possible loss.

Our large assortment of very fine cases, Morocco, Papier Mache, Silk Velvet, Tortoise Shell, and Fancy & Gilt splendid Rosewood and Mahogany Frames to entirely new here.

We are prepared, as the larger size pictures have in the Galleries heretofore, to the smaller ones, to introduce them here, and would take them on very moderate terms. Persons desirous to display their whole figure or dress, to advantage, should chose one of the largest size plates.

Owing to imperfect Lithography (of other operators) pictures were constantly sent out in the same case at half price, and particular attention
