The Legislature.

We clip the following account of the proceeding of the Legislature, from the Register of Saturday last.

THE LEGISLATURE. In the Senate on Tuesday, the Free Suffrage bill, it will be seen, was taken up on firmative, the bill was lost, Mr. Hoke, of Lincoln, who had voted AGAINST the bill, pass or not. This much we know however : while a number of the others, if not all, are opposed to amending that instrument by ples combined may defeat the bill.

The bill to incorporate the Atlantic and the following North Carolina Rail Road Company, after an animated discussion, which was participated in by a number of gentlemen, passed its third reading, by a vote of Ayes 56, Noes 52, and was ordered to be engrossed and sent to the Senate. The announcement of the passage of this imprint measure was required with prolonged applause. In our text, we propose to give an outline of its

No legislative action of importance was had in the Senate.

In a postseript in the Weekly Post we see that the Atlantic and North Carolina Rail Road Bill has passed the House on its third rending, by what majority it does not for the ensuing year state. This Road connects the Central Road at Goldsboro with Beanfort on the seahoard. The resources of that portion of our noble old State, owing to its geographical situation, and the want of a safe communication with the occasi, can never be fully developed unless the Legislature does something to give it the advantages of a back-country trade.
