North Carolina Whig.

CHARLOTTE:

WEDNESDAY, April 27, 1853.

☞ WILLIAM THOMPSON, Esq., is our agent in Baltimore, authorized to obtain advertisements and subscriptions, and to grant receipts.

☞ E. W. CARR, Esq., is our agent in Philadelphia, authorized to obtain advertisements and procure subscriptions.

☞ V. B. Palmer, Esq., is our authorized agent to receive advertisements and subscriptions at his offices in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

FOR CONGRESS,

JAMES W. OSBORNE,

OF MECKLENBURG COUNTY.

CANDIDATE FOR CLERK.

The friends of WM. S. REID, take great pleasure in announcing his name to the People of the County of Mecklenburg, as a candidate for the Office of County Court Clerk, at the ensuing August Election.

And still they Come!

See the advertisements of Messrs. Irwin & Huggins, Drucker & Sommers, T. Trotter & Son and John Wells, and others. All are now receiving their Spring supply, and we have no hesitation in saying that NEW GOODS can be had at as low a style of prices as could be found in Charlotte at this time. Our readers will know where to forget Bargains.

More Copper Mines.

In Guilford and the surrounding Country, the "Copper fever" is raging considerably, and the prospect of an abundant yield of the ore is very great. We learn from a Communication in the Raleigh Register that the richest Copper mine in North Carolina is in Randolph County, and was worked 20 years ago for gold, and was abandoned on account of the Copper. It is to be tested whether the above is the richest Copper Mine in North Carolina. If what we have heard is true, Mecklenburg will stand a fair chance for the palm. One gentleman informs us that while grinding gold ore pieces of Copper has been taken out of the mill as large as 100 dollars and another one informs us that a large piece of rock which retained heat so well was used for heating water to scald hogs, this is believed to be Copper Ore. In fact at every mine the pyrites, which has been thrown away as useless, turns out much of it to be Copper Ore. Even in our streets we have seen rich specimens of this metal. It must therefore, be abundant in this County.

Dip You Whikh.

A gentleman has his paper discontinued a few days ago, because in remarking about the hot policy of North Carolina relating to internal improvements, we applied this term to her course. It is a little saying that the truth offends more sensibly than a falsehood—as in this case. Had it been untrue he would have passed it by as unworthy of notice, but he is reminded that North Carolina has neglected to improve her condition that some do not like to hear it even mentioned. We regret it as much as any one, but we shall never be deterred from uttering it. And to show that the course of our gone old State has been followed to her injury, we can point to what would now have been the principle emporium of North Carolina had the sage views of Paul Caldwell, of Chapel Hill, been acted on by her citizens, some 30 years ago! Why, as was thought that we might have coal road from the mountains to Beaufort, and a market opened to our citizens for not only coal but to our extraordinary products, to our own Ports. Then our whole wealth would have been developed and her citizens now enjoying the rich benefits, that they failed to secure and which are visible in other States have been benefitted by the improvements of the age and the trade and not even a hand or arm, as it were, came to gather crops. But we hope we are wrong from our theory, and that our citizens are now alive to their true interests.

Vice Presidency.

As this office, is now vacant by the death of the Hon. W. R. King, we have thought the following list of 1792. It seems worthy of remembrance at the death of the President, the President pro tempore of the Senate will fill the office until a new President is elected.

Sec. 9. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 10. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 11. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 12. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 13. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 14. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 15. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 16. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 17. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 18. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 19. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 20. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 21. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 22. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 23. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 24. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 25. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 26. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 27. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 28. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 29. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 30. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 31. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 32. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 33. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 34. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 35. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 36. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 37. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 38. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 39. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 40. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 41. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 42. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 43. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 44. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 45. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 46. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 47. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 48. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 49. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 50. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 51. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 52. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 53. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 54. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 55. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 56. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 57. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 58. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 59. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 60. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 61. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 62. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 63. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 64. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 65. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 66. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 67. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 68. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 69. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 70. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 71. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 72. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 73. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 74. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 75. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 76. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 77. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 78. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 79. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 80. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 81. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 82. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 83. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 84. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 85. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 86. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 87. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 88. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 89. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 90. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 91. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 92. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 93. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 94. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 95. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 96. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 97. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 98. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 99. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 100. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 101. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 102. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 103. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 104. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 105. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 106. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 107. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 108. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 109. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 110. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 111. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 112. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 113. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 114. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of Representatives, during the residue of the term for which the President shall have been elected, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Sec. 115. And in case of the removal of the President of the United States from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the President of the Senate pro tempore, and if there shall be no President of the Senate, then on the Speaker of the House of