PALACE OF THE TUILERIES, Jan 20, 18-54 .- Size -- The difference which has arisen between your Majosty and the Ottoman Porte has assumed such a grave aspect that I think it right myself to explain directly to your Majesty the part which France has taken in this question and the means which

Up to hat period, then, we were, I may say, intorested spectators, but simply spectators of the dispute, when the affair of Sinope compelled us to take a more decisive part. France and England had not thought it necessary to send troops to the assistance of Turkey. Their Hags, therefore, were not engaged in the conflicts which took place upon innal. But at sea it was very different. There were at the entrance of the Bo-phorus 3:00 guns, the existence of which proclaimed loudly enough to Turkey that the two leading maritime Powers would not allow her to be attacked by sea. The affair at Sinope was for us as painful as it was unexpected; for it matters little to us whether or not the Turks wished to convey munitions of war to the Russian territory. In fact, Russiau slops attacked Turkish vessels in the waters of Turkey while those vessels were riding quietly at anchor which he had thrown himself upon entering, because Ellis had won the heart of pretty tenderly, devotedly, but in a thoughtless and evil hour I tempted her, and she fell.
