Sunday Reading.

Extract from ... ey's Letters to Min... rs.

I am ... amazed that I so far overlooked ... passages in the Bible which speak ... influence of the flesh upon the mind. The three great enemies of the soul are represented in the Bible as the world, the flesh and the devil. I used to preach against the world and against the devil, and warn Christians against their influence: but I must say with shame that I knew but very little of what was meant by these warnings in the Bible against the influence of the flesh. Such passages as these were not deeply pondered and well considered by me: "The fleshly mind is enmity against God." "To be carnally" or fleshly "minded is death." "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die." "Therefore mortify your members which are upon the earth." "He that is Christ's hath crucified the flesh, with its affections and lusts." "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection." "Be ye not deceived: God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." "They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh." "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is their shame, who mind earthly things."

These, and multitudes of other passages of Scripture, I must confess with shame, have been till recently very much overlooked by me; i. e. I did not ponder and well understand their meaning. And I can now see that I confounded the influence of the world and the devil with that of the flesh. I am now fully convinced, however, that the flesh has more to do with the backsliding of the church than either the world or the devil. Every man has a body, and every man's body, in this age of the world, is more or less impaired by intemperance of one kind or another. Almost every person, whether he is aware of it or not, is, in a greater or less degree, a dyspeptic, and suffering under some form of disease arising out of intemperance. And I would humbly ask, Is it understood and proclaimed by ministers, that a person can no more expect healthful manifestations of mind in a fit of dyspepsia than in a fit of intoxication? Is it understood and preached to the church, that every violation of the physical laws of the body as certainly and as necessarily prevents healthy and holy developments, in proportion to the extent of the infraction of physical law, as does the use of alcohol. In short my brethren, do we understand, sufficiently consider, and proclaim the fact, that man is a compound being; that his soul is entirely dependent upon the physical system for all its manifestations; and that, therefore, unless we eat and drink for the glory of God, or in such a manner as to promote our highest physical perfection, unless we render our "bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable," it is naturally impossible that our souls should prosper? I am convinced that the temperance reformation has but just begun, and that the total abstinence principle, in regard to a great many other subjects besides alcohol, will yet come before the church and the world with considerable extent. I regard it as a fixed and unalterable truth that, until ... physiological and dietetic habits of ... are corrected, spiritual declensions and ... backslidings are inevitable. The laws of the physical system are the laws of God. They must be searched out and proclaimed by ministers, and obeyed by all men who expect to have their souls prosper.

It is manifest that Paul regarded dietetic reform as ... essential to thorough and permanent moral reform, and was in the habit of preaching and insisting much on this subject. In writing to the Philippian church, he says, "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ, whose end is destruction, whose glory is their shame, who mind earthly things." Now it is worthy of all observation here.

That he had often warned them on the subject of making a God of their belly, before; and now, finding them so obstinately persevering in their sensuality, he told them again, even weeping, that they were the enemies of the cross of Christ, and that the evidence of this was that they made a God of their belly, and gloried in those habits of living that were a shame to them. Now if Paul, nearly eighteen hundred years ago, warned the Christian church often upon this subject, and wept over the sensuality of Christians, certainly it should be thought by ministers of some importance at the present time.—Guide to Holiness.

THE NAME ABOVE EVERY NAME.

There is something inexpressibly sweet in the name of 'Jesus.' This fact has, no doubt, occured to the reader, both from observation and experience. Within the last few hours several delightfully illustrative facts have occurred to my mind, which perhaps I may be allowed to refer to.

Paul, when speaking of the exaltation of the Messiah, tells us that 'at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow; and it is assuredly true that none of the names of the Saviour are so frequently used as this. Whoever attended the death bed of a pious child without hearing it use this name whenever it referred to the Redeemer of souls? What Christian has not sung with, more than ordinary delight the lines,

"Jesus! I love thy charming name,
'Tis music to my ear."

Mrs. Duncan in her exquisitely beautiful but neglected book, published by the Carters, three years ago, 'America as I found it,' says that a Welsh Missionary from Ohio mentioned on a platform at New York the fact of a Welsh woman who often walked six miles to worship, though she did not understand English, because the name of Jesus often occurred in the service, and the sound of it warmed her heart. When a good old bishop lay dying, it was found that his memory had failed as to the existence of his dearest friends, and even of his children, but the mention of Jesus called forth his highest delight and admiration.

Even those acquainted with the Saviour and his redemption ... have been attracted by his name. Mrs ... nelpenick, in her work on ... mentions a riot in a prison, who ... appeal to the rioters, the name ... was incidentally pronounced, and ... ader at once inquired as to its meaning, saying that it had disarmed him, and listened with profound and solemn attention to the instructions he received in reply to his question.

We might easily go on with facts of this character; but an object will be accomplished if our readers will more frequently turn away from inferior objects to meditate on 'Jesus, the Mediator of the new covenant.' Too often have we occasion to complain of conversations, of sermons, and of books, in the language of an eminently excellent man. William F. Lloyd, many years editor of the Religious Tract Society in London, who, in rejecting a manuscript offered for publication would remark, 'There is not in it enough of the name that is above every name.'

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ear?
It soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fear."

ASHES ON LAND.

During the past week we have been mowing clover upon a lot which was partially ashed with leached ashes, at the rate of about 100 bushels to the acre, three years ago. The lot was sown to winter wheat in the fall of 1852, and we commenced ashing it but did not quite finish, leaving a strip of some four or five acres through the middle that was unashed. At harvest the next year there was no difficulty in discerning the ashed from the unashed, by the greatly increased amount of both wheat and straw upon the former. Last year it was sown to spring wheat and settled down with clover and timothy. There was a marked difference in the spring wheat, and now it is more manifest than ever in the clover and grass. So strong is the contrast, that a person can trace, with little difficulty, the very spot where the ashes end. There will be at least double the hay made from the one that there is from the other.

The soil is a slaty loam—more slate than anything else—has not been manured, and it is rather, light and weak. As long as we can get ashes, and we have quite a pile yet, we do not want plaster. The effect upon the land is much more lasting than plaster. We think, however, that a half a bushel to the square rod or 80 bushels to the acre, is as much as can be profitably applied, and on light, dry land 50 bushels would perhaps be enough.

The value of leached ashes as a dressing for land was known to the Romans as long ago as the days of Virgil, for we find in the first book of the Georgics, speaking of the preparation of the soil for exhausting crops, like oats and flax, they recommend to saturate the soil with rich dung, and

"Effeta cinerem immundum jactare per agros."

Which, being put into Yankee, means to scatter leached ashes upon the land or field. He also says:

"Saepe etiam sterilis incendere profuit agros,
Atque levem stipulam crepitantibus urere flammis.'

Or, in plain English, "Often, too, it has been of use to set fire to barren lands, and burn light stubble in crackling flames."

A friend, with whom we were recently conversing on this subject, says that some years ago he put a pretty liberal supply of ashes on about two acres of rather light, thin land, and his crops have been uniformly good since. He is a great believer in leached ashes, and regrets his neighbor has not another pile he don't think worth drawing.

RAISE YOUR OWN PORK.

Every farmer, in North-Carolina, at least, should make it one of the principles of his domestic economy, to raise his own pork, and his proportion to spare, to supply the home market for those, who, not being engaged in agricultural pursuits, are compelled to purchase. Our farmers should firmly resolve, and be determined to see that not a dollar should go out of the State for the purchase of pork. Such a policy would promote their own individual interest, as well as that of the aggregate community. The importance of keeping their money from flowing out of the State, that it may remain for improvement and all useful purposes, among those by whose industry it is made, is too well understood to need comment. The only question of moment, is, can the hundreds of thousands of dollars annually withdrawn from the pockets of our people, for Kentucky pork, be saved to the State by raising supplies among ourselves? In other words, could it be done profitably? All will admit its possibility. We contend, it can be done unmitigatingly to the raiser, and so one will question, beneficially to the rest of the community. In this opinion, we do not advance any abstract theory or chimerical notion; but find ourself supported by the practice of some of our most thrifty and prosperous farmers, which knocks the objection of the less provident—that they can buy cheaper than they can raise—"into an exploded bubble." How stands the case? We know some farmers who raise more cotton, according to their force, than their neighboring pork buyers; and make, in addition, plenty of pork and corn for their own support, and always have a surplus of both corn and pork to sell: and, moreover, always have fat horses, fat mules, and sleek and greasy negroes. They evidently have the advantage of those who depend on buying. And how do they succeed so well? The question is easily answered, without going into particulars, in few words: It is found in good management and careful and diligent personal superintendence of their business. By the use of a slop boiler: early spring vegetables; summer and fall root crops; rye sowed to be grazed in winter and eaten by the hogs, when ripe, in the field: field peas, with an early variety, in an enclosed field, to begin upon; clover and lucerne, in small lots, for cows and pigs; fruit, apples, plums, peaches, mulberries, &c—by the use of these, systematically arranged and pursued, every farmer, from the smallest to the greatest among us, will find it both practicable and profitable to raise his own pork. And more if they will generally commence the work forthwith, we will venture the prediction that the Kentucky pork drovers will be driven from the State, entirely, in less than three years.

The foregoing remarks are also applicable to the raising of our own horses, mules, cattle and butter.

PUTTING UP SWEET POTATOES.

We would be glad to know the best mode for putting up sweet potatoes, to preserve them from rotting; and among your numerous readers, we trust (before harvesting time) the experience of some successful ones will give us the desired information. Wishing well to your enterprise, I remain, yours.

CHAS. H. ALEXANDER.

Topsail Sound P. O., N. Hanover co., May 15, 1855.

Remarks by the Editor of the Arator.—We have used four methods of putting up Sweet Potatoes with success; to which we give preference in the order in which they are named below.

1st. From fifty to a hundred bushels in a hill, which is made as follows: If out of doors, dry dirt is raised in a circular form a foot above the common level, to begin laying the potatoes upon; in the centre of which three rough boards are set on end with edges together, forming a triangular flue to pass off the steam. Commence packing and carry up the pile of potatoes around these boards, in sugar loaf form, to near the top. After the potatoes are thus stacked carefully, cover them over three or four inches deep with dry corn stalks; then cover the stalks with such dirt as the potatoes grew in, four inches thick, pat it well all over, and the hill is finished. The mouth of the flue in the centre should be left open, until hard freezing weather; then stopped with hay. The potatoes should be carefully picked over before putting up, and all the cut and bruised ones thrown out for immediate use. The hill should be covered with a shelter that will keep every part of the hill from getting wet. We have repeatedly put up potatoes in this way, in an old open log house, and invariably with complete success.

2ndly. Make the hill in the same way, in every particular, except, that instead of using corn stalks, cover with pine straw.—Many put up in this way altogether, and generally succeed.

3d. Put up in a hill without boards, and cover with the dirt taken from the patch, without any other covering, except a good shelter to keep out the rain. We have tried this twice, and with such good success, that we shall put up a part of our crop in the same manner again the ensuing fall.

4. Dry cellars. Some of our Wake county farmers save their potatoes in dry cellars, and we learn from them they never fail to preserve them. One difficulty in this is, the want of cellar room for large crops.

Many of our farmers prefer potatoe houses. They are made of logs from five to seven feet high—the logs being doubled—leaving three or four inches space between the outer and inner walls, which is packed with dirt. A floor is laid above, which is covered by some with hay or straw. They have two doors—one, (the outside) bored all over with auger holes, to admit air—the other (the inside one) is fitted tight to exclude air. Until very cold weather, the inside door stands open, when it is closed, and all danger of freezing is avoided.

A great deal depends upon the weather and condition of the potatoes when dug. To insure their keeping well, they should not be taken up too early, but care should be taken to prevent their being bit by frost.

We hope some of our potatoe raisers, will furnish us with a statement of the best plan for both raising and saving that valuable crop.

☞ The Washington Organ says: On the receipt of the news from Louisville in regard to the late riots, the Editor of a certain evening paper in this city remarked to a Frenchman, (and in the hearing of a reliable American gentleman, whose name we can give if necessary,) that "he wished 10,000 Americans had been slain by the foreigners there!"

The above is no foolish hearsay, but a fact—which we wish all of our citizens—never mind what their political sentiments may be—to read and think over. Such a remark, coming from anybody, is bad enough, but coming as it does from a representative of the sentiments of the present administration—is what!—Wil. Herald.

THE COTTON TRADE.—The export of cotton from the United States to Great Britain so far this year, it is stated, show a falling off of 51,000 bs. as compared with last year. The deficiency in the receipts at the various ports in the United States is estimated at 114,000 bales. The ships now loading at cotton ports for Great Britain, amount to 18 in number against 38 for the same date last year.

Roger's Liverwort & Tar

For the complete cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Asthma, Bronchitis, Spitting of Blood, and all other Lung Complaints tending to Consumption.

This preparation is getting into use all over our country. The numerous letters we receive from our various agents, informing us of cures effected in their immediate neighborhoods, warrant us in saying it is one of the best, if not the very best Cough Medicine now before the public. It almost invariably relieves and not unfrequently cures the very worst cases. When all other Cough preparations have failed, this has restored the patient, as Druggists, dealers in Medicines, and Physicians can testify. Ask the agent in your nearest town, what has been his experience of the effects of this medicine. If he has been selling it for any length of time, he will tell you

IT IS THE BEST MEDICINE EXTANT.

Below we give a few extracts from letters we have received lately regarding the virtues of this medicine.

Dr. S. S. Odlin, of Knoxville, Ga., says:—I have been using your Liverwort and Tar very extensively in my practice for three years past, and, it is with pleasure I state my belief in its SUPERIORITY OVER ALL OTHER ARTICLES with which I am acquainted, for which it is recommended."

Messrs. Fitzgerald & Benners, writing from Waynesville, N. C., say:—"The Liverwort and Tar is becoming daily more popular in this country, AND WE THINK JUSTLY SO. All who have tried it speak in commendable terms of it, and say it is very beneficial in alleviating the complaints for which it is recommended."

Our Agent in Pickens District, S. C., Mr. S. R. McFall, assures us "that he uses it with great benefit in his own family, and recommends it to his neighbors." He gives an instance of a negro woman, in his vicinity, who had been suffering with disease of the Lungs for years, attended with a severe cough, who was relieved by the Liverwort and Tar.

Such are the good reports we hear of this Medicine from all parts of the South. For a report of the surprising cures it has performed in the Western and Northern and Eastern States, we would invite the suffering patient to read the pamphlet which accompanies each bottle. To all, we say, have hope, have hope!

TRY THE MEDICINE!!

The Proprietor of this Medicine will state, without hesitation or fear of contradiction, that the STAMPEDE MIXTURE has cured more persons where it has been introduced, than any other medicine in use for the above diseases. This medicine has neither Arsenic nor Quinine in its composition, all of the ingredients are of a perfectly healthy character, and highly stimulating and invigorating in their tendency. Persons while using this medicine will not be affected by exposure to water or a damp atmosphere no more than when in their usual health. DR JOHNSTON,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons London, Graduate from one of the most eminent Colleges of the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known. Many troubled with ringing in the ears and head when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds and bashfulness with frequent blushing attended sometimes, with derangement of mind, were cured immediately.

A CERTAIN DISEASE.

When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds he has imbibed the seeds of this pernicious disease, it too often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame or dread of discovery deters him from applying to those who from education and respectability can alone befriend him, delay until the system has become corrupted, the constitutional symptoms of the fatal disease make their appearance, such as sore throat, ulcerated nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, blotches on the head, face and extremities, progress on with frightful rapidity, taint the blood, and the whole train of mercurial symptoms, or the venereal is, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a mortal object of commiseration till death puts a period to his painful sufferings by sending him to that bourne from whence no traveller returns.

To such therefore, Dr Johnston pledges himself to preserve the most inviolable secrecy, and from his extensive practice in the first Hospitals in Europe and America, he can confidently recommend a safe and speedy cure to the unfortunate victim of this horrid disease. It is a melancholy fact that thousands fall victims to this dread disease owing to the mock delicacy of ignorant pretenders and the fear of that ridicule you are subjected to by the use of that deadly poison mercury, ruining the constitution and either send the unfortunate sufferer to an untimely grave, or else make the victim of his miseries a

Persons living at a distance can be cured at home by strictly conforming to the directions and rules that will be forwarded to them. Medicines sent to all parts of the United States and Canadas, by Express, securely packed from observation, with full directions for use. Advice gratis.

Young men who have injured themselves by certain practices indulged in when alone, a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be snatched from all prospects and enjoyments of life by the consequences of deviating from the path of virtue, and indulging in certain secret habits. Such persons, before contemplating

MARRIAGE,

Should reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connubial happiness. Indeed, without these, the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage; the prospect hourly darkens to the view, the mind becomes shadowed with despair and filled with the most horrible reflections that the happiness of another becomes blighted with our own.
