RE AXERSA TENNYSHING come from hours of cost and hero, I make a sudden usily, and spatish out among the fero, To maker down the valley,

Til lest by Philip's farm, I flow To pun the brimining river: For ean most come and met may go, But I go on largers.

I clatter over stony ways, In little star; a soil tribles: In lettle whar, a mini frame.
I behinds note existing beyon,
I behinds on the punktur.

With many a cutve my banks I fest, By many a facil and follow; And many a facily ferrious set, With willow wasse and mallow.

I chatter, chatter at 1 flow.

To just the britaining river; is now may come and man may go, that I go me hereby; I wind shout, and is and out, With here a blossom seeling; And here and there a graying. And here and there a graying.

And here and there a foomy flake Upon Am as I travel; With many a silvery water break Above the guiden gravel;

And draw them along, and flow To you the beauting river; Fermion may rome and note may go, But I go do between.

I shall by bases and graves plots, I state by bases covers I me to the second lorger me note That give for happy letters

I slip, I slice I glosse, I glosse, Among my walesming a wellow, I mean the health a surbeaus mines Against my wrony stallows. I required where nown and wate, in Seasonly Wilderseas.

Thater recess my creases. And out again I curre and flow, To join the brancing river: For more may done and more may go, But I grand moves.

A few moments later and the half dezen men who were at the station at the time were following in the festisteps of the frenzied settler, who led the way into the deep forest with the most trantic desperation.

"On, friends on! and may the good God save my helpless wife and children!" the poor half crazed pioneer "No! no! not that way?" eagerly now, Margy," can't you give me some refield Davis, his eyes burning with all supper?"

Meanwhile let us go back to the cabin. The redskins who had started after poor Davis only pursued hum few rods, and then gave up the classe, and repoint the others at the cabin, the door of which Mrs. Davis had so apportunely closed at the first alarm given.

The savages then commenced a ferroreous assualt upon the doors and windows—all of which were closed—but, though rough and small, the cabin was tight and small, the cabin was tight and substantial, and for a long time made but little progress notwith their might.
