The Mummified Body of a Man. "The mummified body of a man," the San Francisco Bullein says, "has been found near Selma, Fresno county. It is in perfect state of preservation, being thoroughly dried and as hard as a board, without the least sign or odor. The flesh is as hard as sole leather and as black as the mummies of the ancients. The body is evidently that of a Mexican."

The Coming Congress.

The Coming Congress.

A few weeks more will bring the Fifty-second Congress, in some respects a peculiar body, differing from any of its precedessors. It will represent a reaction from the result of the presidential year of 1888. One of the most interesting issues before this Congress will be that of free coinage of silver. The free coinage men are assumed to be in a great majority in the Democratic party and in Congress as a body. But the very existence of this majority as a practical force in legisla-President Davis' Furniture.

Sleeplessness, nervous prostration

Very existence of this majority as a practical force in legislation depends on conditions. The policy of the two parties will be modified or rather shaped by their supposed exigencies in the campaign of 1892. As it controls the popular house of Congress and is likely in the condition of affairs to take the initiation of affairs to take the initiative, the Democratic party's plan of action will be one of peculiar interest. The drift of affairs for a few weeks to come may indicate what will be its

Whichever side of a question an arguer is on, ought to know that one of the first rules of logic is to concede to the opposing side all the facts that fairly belong to it, with their proper inferences. But the style of political argument too much in vogue has been to seize on two facts that exist side by side and claim one as the consequence of the other. It is as the logician should say, "A horse has four legs; a table has four downcast and smoke a good ci- legs, therefore a table is a horse."

If the cause of university extension advances in America as is expected, then we may hore in time to hear orators that are fair in argument, letting facts go for what they are worth and knowing how to use them.
