She Knew Where She Was

St. Louis Republic.

She was a pretty creature, with a willowy form and a wicked twinkle in her eye, and as she stood out on Finney avenue hailing an approaching car, with her skirts doubled about her to keep them out of the wet, she looked doubly entrancing. The car was one of the vestibuled ones, and, in one end, smoking was permitted. Into this portion of the car my lady backed, though several cigars, braced up by good, healthy lungs, had already provided enough smoke to stagger a smoke inspector. She did not seem to notice, and was not the least affected by the dense fumes. The conductor soon approached and, while counting out some change to her, said, very needlessly to my mind, in view of the condition of the atmosphere, that this end was a smoking car.

"But you may remain if you do not mind the smoke," he concluded.

"But I'm going to smoke, too," she said.

The news of a Chinese victory would not have been more surprising. The conductor clutched one of the hanging straps for support, drew a long breath, and then took a good look, if a good look, if a somewhat rude one, at his fair passenger. She was quite unabashed. Two men heard the remark, and also turned a look at her, but she turned two full, deep blue eyes upon them so innocently that they were compelled from sheer etiquette to remove their gaze. There seemed to be mischief lurking behind those same blue eyes, too, but it did not show itself much.

She opened her reticule quite calmly, as if no harm were within one hundred miles of her, and produced the neatest of small cigarette boxes. It opened with a click, and showed also some waxed matches. Then, wonderful sight, she lit a cigarette as neatly and carelessly as if she were the most inquisitive and callow youth that ever learned to puff cigarettes at college. And when she had finished Vandeventer avenue had been reached. She tossed the stump upon the car floor and signalled the conductor to stop. She then alighted, and a moment after she tripped up the stone steps and thence into the gymnasium of the Pastime Athletic Club, where she is a member of the ladies' class.

In a recent speech ex-President Harrison, who is a candidate for re-nomination, said: "I have always believed that a larger use of silver for money, and free coinage of silver upon a basis to be agreed upon, that would maintain its parity with gold, was good for the whole world." This shows how convinced Mr. Harrison is of the power of the silver craze that has seized the people of the country at large, irrespective of their political affiliation. If its strength shall increase, as now seems certain, the Presidential of both the Democratic and Republican parties next year will probably be silver men, in which case the business affairs and material welfare of the whole country will, and not untruly, induce all those personally interested therein, to look for a man totally exempt and beyond the reach of the craze referred to for their candidate, and logically, their eyes would at once be fixed upon Mr. Cleveland.—Alexandria Gazette.

Nature promises to be very prodigal with her favors this year and the weather crop bulletin for May is a signal prophecy of rich harvests in grain and great returns from the orchards. The fruit bloom was never so abundant, and, with the single exception of the mountainous sections, the result will be beyond and previous record if blossoms count for anything and blossoms always count if the frosts keep away. The outlook is a welcome one, as the farmers and fruit-growers have suffered heavy losses in recent years. Both producer and consumer will benefit in this year of plenty.

Money.

Wilmington Star.

One of the objections urged against the coining of more silver is that what we have already coined cannot be got into circulation and therefore it is not only useless but foolish to coin more. This objection has about as much bottom in it as a sieve; but if there anything it it would apply with more force to gold than it does to silver, for there is more silver in actual circulation than there is gold. We have in round figures about $500,000,000 in gold. How much of that is used as a currency in the ordinary business transactions of the country? The people handle a hundred dollars in silver to the one in gold they handle, and yet we are told that must stop the coining of silver, because it cannot be got into circulation and go on coining gold, very little of which is in circulation and very little of which the people ever see. More silver is not in circulation, not because the people don't want it or object to handling it, but because there has been determined and concerted action by the gold manipulators of this country to keep it out of circulation and thus discredit it all they can by making it appear that it will not circulate, and the United States Treasury co-operates with them, whether intentionally or not, by refusing to pay out silver in meeting obligations when under the law it has the right to do so. The Government itself turns its back on its own silver, the money rings combine against it, it has to fight for recognition and existence against both, against both, and yet there is more of it in actual circulation than there is of gold. If it had fair play and honest treatment there would now be four times as much now in circulation as there is.

A Good Showing.

The excellent credit of the United States, says the Philadelphia Times, as shown by the prevailing high prices of government bonds, greatly worries the critics of the administration.

True, they have much to comfort them in the diminished revenues, for which they hold Mr. Cleveland entirely to blame; yet in spite of this, and in spite of all the silver talk, investors will persist in believing that the Treasury is going to meet its obligations in standard money, and they keep on buying bonds at rate that would have seemed wildly extravagant before the recent operation that replenished the gold reserve.

To justify these patriotic organs, U. S. bonds ought to have continued to decline, as they probably would have done if that wise arrangement with the syndicate had not been made. But the operation having been successful even beyond expectation and its wisdom thus splendidly demonstrated, the organs are in greater distress than ever. It would seem that nothing short of national bankruptcy would make them really happy.

The Latter-Day Epidemic.

Wilmington Messenger.

It is not strange as it may appear to some to read of so much crime in our land. Poor fallen human nature is not a good nature. Is any man safe from sin and crime who is "out of Christ"? May he not be tempted at some point that will tend to his undoing? Look at the newspapers, visit the prisons and penitentiaries and reformatories and places of lust and debauchery and get the answer. There is a fearful mania for murder and rape. Is it surprising? Look at the court records. Over 8,000 murders in 1894, and but little more than 100 executions by the regularly constituted courts. What a dead failure! The Baltimore Herald, nothing this mania for homicide tells this:

"The police authorities and courts in three States are investigating horrible murders, where young girls have fallen victims first to felonious assaults and then to homicide. In Massachusetts, Maryland and California three outrages upon innocence have been perpetrated almost simultaneously, while, as if to accentuate the tale of crime, a bucheery is reported from New York slums and Dr. Buchanan, the wife murderer, has reached the end of the appliances known to criminal lawyers to delay punishment and defeat justice."

Men commit the most awful crimes without any after manifestation of compunction. Some go through the face of a profession of religion, but the truth is that the worst offenders are monsters in human form, and are calm, self-contained, callous and will die "gamecocks" and go out of life into internal punishment with not much more of conscious fear apparently than "dumb-driven cattle."

Speaker Crisp's Views.

Lynchburg News.

Speaker Crisp was in Washington a few days ago, and while there was interviewed by the press reporters as to the money question in the South. To one of them he said: "There is considerable talk about silver down South, but I don't know that it is any more pronounced now than at any other time, although it may seem to be so on account of the general prominence given to the financial question throughout the country. You see the South has always believed in the use of silver in the national currency. I am not prepared to say that the thinking people of that section would come out radically on a silver single standard. They are not radical about anything. They believe, however, that we cannot have a return of the prosperous conditions in this country on the contracted currency of a gold basis. There seems to be a general willingness among our people to give silver an opportunity."

When asked what significance he thought attached to the coming "sound money" convention to be held in Memphis on the 23rd of the present month, Mr. Crisp said:

"That gathering will represent the boards of trade and commercial organizations of the South. It will not be representative of the mass of the people nor of their sentiments about silver. I hope at that meeting they will argue and discuss the silver question from their standpoint. These self-styled 'sound money' people do not make arguments to support their general allegations. They simply state something as a fact and let it go at that. This will not satisfy the people. They want to know the reasons, the why and the wherefore of the matter, because the advocates of silver have explained their position and the reasons actuating them in taking it."

That is a correct statement of the whole affair. The Memphis convention will be composed of delegates appointed by boards of trade, commercial organizations and bankers, and will not represent the mass of the people or their sentiments about the money question. It is a convention gotten up by gold monometallists to try and influence Southern sentiment upon the silver question, and, if possible, to break the solid Democratic South in the next Presidential election. The people of the South will not be in it or of it. Carlisle and Hoke Smith, two members of the cabinet, will be there to represent President Cleveland's "sound money" views. Wall Street will have a full representation no doubt, and all the other delegates present will simply be there to sneeze when the others take snuff.

State News.

Senator Pritchard was hurt by a runaway horse at Asheville Thursday.

It is rumored that the Seaboard Air Line shops will be moved from Raleigh to Portsmouth.

Concord Times: Mr. John A. Rankin tells us that he had to kill two young cows last Tuesday. They were bitten by a mad dog several weeks ago, and Tuesday showed signs of being mob, so they were killed. One of Mr. Rankin's horses and a jack were also bitten, but so far they are all right.

Charlotte News: W. S. DeLong, a cigar drummer in the employ of a Baltimore firm, is "beating" his former customers in various towns in this State, by representing to them that he is expecting a draft from his house and soliciting a loan until it comes. He has been meeting with great success.

Franklinton correspondent to News and Observer: Jos. J. V. Jones, who lived near here, was struck by lightning and instantly killed Friday afternoon while in the field planting corn. Mr. Jones was the uncle of Rev. J. R. Cole, of Raleigh, and was a highly respected citizen. He was 74 years old, and was for many years watchman at the insane asylum at Raleigh.

Washington Progress: "Big Sofie," a colored woman who is very large and has a superstition about being weighed, was decoyed on the scales at the A. C. L. depot and she tipped the beam at 415 pounds.

Raleigh Press: The man Driver, who was arrested here yesterday on suspicion that he was the barn burner, escaped from Lillington jail turns out to be another individual by the name of Driver but with different initials. He has been released.

Wilmington Messenger: W. E. Worth has planted 500 pecan trees on his place on the Wilmington and Weldon railroad, four miles from Wilmington. They are thriving nicely. He expects to plant 500 every year until he gets fifty acres planted.

News and Observer: The last legislature appropriated to the institution for the blind and colored institution for the deaf, dumb and blind here nine thousand dollars to be used in making improvements. The committee of the colored institution has decided how to use its seven thousand. The money will be expended in building two wings to the present building. Superintendent Young, of the blind institution, says that it has not yet been decided how the two thousand appropriated to that institution will be used. Work on the buildings at the colored school will soon begin.

Asheville correspondent of the News and Observer: In the federal court room this afternoon Robert Ray, the town marshal of Burnsville, who had been sentenced to one month imprisonment and fined one hundred dollars and costs, drew a pistol and started for the door. The crowd stampeded but the deputy marshals seized Ray and struggled with him several minutes, finally subduing and placed him in irons. Several p'stoles were drawn during the struggle and the matter looked exceedingly squally for a time.

General News.

"I am in favor of a silver basis," said a railroad president recently, "because it will enable us to get labor a great deal cheaper than we get it now." The workmen of the country ought to throw their caps in the air and yell for silver monometallism.—Atlanta Journal.

Williams, that "the present so-called reformers are self-appointed, and are weak because in no way a representative body chosen by the people." True as gospel. Probably not half of the members of the committee of 70 would have been elected by the people to represent them in reform.—New York Sun.

Governor Brown is said to be firmly of the opinion that his son was the victim of Mrs. Gordon's wiles, and that the assassination was premeditated. Non-sense. If Gordon had made his wife sue for damages there might have been some ground for such belief, but no man shoots his wife and her paramour who is conniving at her baseness.—News and Observer.

The parade of troops about Pocahontas is costing the state something over $1,000 per day, and we are not sure that there was any real necessity for sending the troops to the coal fields.—Danville Register.

Gail Hamilton, the writer, is sick in Washington City.

After being out twenty-nine hours, the jury in the case of the State against ex-State Treasurer Hill, at Lincoln, Neb., reported a disagreement late Saturday night. This will necessitate a new trial of the case. The case related to the liability of the treasurer for state funds to the extent of $300,000, which he had deposited in the Capital National Bank and which was lost by the failure of that bank in January, 1893.

George E. Price, once prominent in Virginia politics, died at the asylum for the insane at Weston, West Virginia, a few days ago, aged 80 years. He was a member of the Virginia senate when he lost his mind, forty-six years ago. He has been in Staunton and Weston asylums ever since.
