FOR THE FARMER

Another successful winter of feeding with ensilage makes one feel like adding another note of praise to this winter food, writes James S. Wilson in The American Cultivator. Properly raised and fed, there is no better friend for the dairymen or cattle raisers. As much harm probably is done by improper feeding as anything else. Some seem to arrive at the conclusion that because the ensilage is good for cattle nothing else is required, and so they sell all their hay and grain and feed ensilage exclusively. No restricted diet like that could for long produce good results. While I am willing to contend that ensilage would prove as good a single diet food as anything we raise on the farm it would be unsafe to feed it without other rations. Hay, straw and grain and even winter vegetables fed with it regularly or occasionally would keep the animals in better condition and stimulate their appetites so they would desire more. We must always consider this latter in any winter feeding. If the rations fed dull the appetite of the animals, something else should be fed. A change in diet is sometimes more essential than anything else.

Besides forming a good winter food that the animals like, the ensilage enables the farmer to sell more of his grain and hay. In a winter like the present ensilage comes in particularly good because grain and hay are both in demand at good prices. The farmer with a well stocked silo can dispose of most of his hay and grain, leaving just enough to carry him along with the ensilage until summer. The result of this is that he will winter his stock in good condition and sell his hay and grain at a big profit. A good diet with ensilage as the basis is to feed the latter twice a day, with a little corn stover or straw in the morning and at noon and a little hay at night. This gives variety enough to keep them in excellent health, and they thrive on the mixture. The corn stover and straw are not very nourishing but they help to improve the digestion of the whole mass. From 30 to 40 pounds of ensilage a day make a good ration. At this rate day one can readily calculate how long an acre's produce will last. From 12 to 15 tons of corn ensilage can be raised to the acre, and on the same land not more than three tons of hay can be harvested. The difference in favor of the corn ensilage is so pronounced that there is little room left for doubt.

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

When Roosevelt Used a Bribe—In a Genoa Study—Deacon White an Old Reporter.

"A friend of mine told me the following story about Governor Roosevelt, that I had never heard before: The present governor was out with a guide after grizzlies, and if one was found the agreement was that Roosevelt should take the first shot, and if he missed the second was to go to the guide. The governor, you know, is unsighted and has to wear glasses. They finally got a shot at a grizzly, and, although the governor succeeded in wounding him, the bear was not fatally wounded and came charging down on them at a terrific rate. Now, big game men unite in saying that, hunt the world over, there is only one form of sport to be found more dangerous than grizzly hunting, and that is a cowboy who has gone wrong, and he, and he only, is likely to give you a better run for your money than a grizzly bear.

"Well, to return to the story. The bear was coming down on them like the Empire State express and emitting loud, rude, belligrunt snorts at every jump. Roosevelt's glasses had been knocked off by the recoil of the gun, and while he could locate the bear by the row he was making he was without the limit of his own glasses vision. Nothing daunted, however, and with every drop of sporting blood in his veins a-tingle, he yelled at the guide: 'Say, Bill, $10! Is it my shot?' and upon that worthy falling a victim to bribery and corruption Roosevelt laid his bearship low when he arrived near enough for him to see where to put a shot in a vital spot."—New York Tribune.

New Tomato for 1900

LIVINGSTON'S MAGNUS.

This very distinct and most promising new variety, of the color of beauty and size, is the latest addition by Livingston to the Tomato family. It is thicker, heavier, and more solid than either of the above, making it easily the most handsome sort in cultivation. The form is perfect, uniform, large and attractive. Flesh very firm. It is a robust grower, with short joints setting its fruit clusters closer together than most varieties, and is therefore a heavy cropper. It is especially adapted for shipping, and is remarkably fine for forcing indoors and out. Order at once.

Encouraging the Best Blood.

Minnesota stock breeders have united in an effort to secure reduced rates for the transportation of pedigreed live stock by express and freight, says The Breeder's Gazette. Never was a movement better grounded in reason. About 15 years ago James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, distributed cartons of pedigreed bulls free among farmers along the line of that road and by such action admitted the reasonableness of the plea with which he and other officials of transportation companies are now approached by stock breeders. Mr. Hill sowed wisely and reaped abundantly in his free gift distribution of bulls. He increased by many thousands the tonnage of cattle carried to market by his road. The northwest is yet sadly in need of live stock development, and nothing will contribute so materially to this end as a reduction in the freight and express rates on pure bred stock consigned to that section. The roads could make no more judicious investment.

Sowing Rape.

For summer pasture rape should be sown about oct seeding time in April and May, according to latitude, says The Sheep Breeder. For late summer and fall feeding sow it in June, July or early August. If sown broadcast, four or five pounds may be used per acre. If planted in drills 26 to 30 inches apart, two or three pounds per acre should be used. It is often sown on out, wheat or barley stubble without plowing, being harrowed in with a light barrow. This makes an abundant fall feed. As a supplement crop it is more extensively sown in corn by scattering the seed ahead of the cultivator at the time of last cultivation. If sown in the cornfield, two pounds of rape seed mixed with one-half pound of turnip seed per acre furnishes an ideal fall feed. This same mixture may be profitably used in seeding with oats or on stubble land.

Realistic Fraud.

The Rural New Yorker tells a newspaper story that years ago W. H. Beard, the famous animal painter, was asked by a maker of toilet preparations to design a label for his bottles of bear's oil. The artist, who did not believe the product to be genuine, produced a design of a big black bear angrily hugging a hog and squeezing from it a stream of lard oil, which ran into a trough labeled bear's grease. Just imagine the result if some realist were to design a similarly appropriate label for the oleomargarine which some of our friends are inclined to handle so tenderly!

French Stalls.

The Western Agriculturist says that the French government studs now include 2,459 stallions. All stallions breeding for public service in France must be inspected by a veterinary and are furnished at a nominal price to the farmer. The result is that France produces the finest horses of two classes in the world—viz, the draft horse and the coach horse.

In a Genoa Study.

Mrs. S. R. Franklin made a reputation as a hostess of no mean renown when her husband, Rear Admiral Franklin, was in command of the United States European squadron early in the eighties. Among the American girls whom she took under her wing was Miss Frances Folsom, now Mrs. Grover Cleveland, who was spending the season in Genoa with her mother.

"HERE IT IS, MADAM," SAID THE SCULPTOR who was an invalid at the time. An eminent sculptor who had a studio in the most picturesque part of the old city was frequently visited by Mrs. Franklin.

One day the sculptor intimated that he was working on one of his masterpieces, and he would like to show it to Mrs. Franklin. She made a special call to inspect the marble with Mrs. Folsom.

"Here it is, madam," said the sculptor, throwing off the drapings. "What do you think of it?"

"Why, I don't know what to say," was the reply. "Of course it's beautiful. It's Miss Frances Folsom, isn't it?"

"Yes," replied the sculptor, "and she likes it so well that she says she will never part with it until she finds a noble husband, and then she will present it to him the first Christmas after their marriage."

Mrs. Franklin's reply is not recorded, but when she visited the White House during the Cleveland regime many pleasant recollections were recalled by a glimpse of the familiar figure standing in the president's favorite room—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Deacon White, Reporter.

Deacon Stephen V. White is the ideal man from the newspaper reporter's standpoint. He was a central figure the other day in a controversy in Plymouth church and when asked for his side of the matter promptly sat down and wrote a statement.

"This is a first rate newspaper copy you've turned out," remarked the reporter.

"It ought to be," said the deacon. "I'm about the oldest reporter in Brooklyn. I was hunting up news away back in 1822."

"They must have paid slashing big space rates in those days. You've got a mighty fine house for an ex-reporter," observed the newspaper man.

The deacon laughed, probably at the thought of his reportorial earnings and the millions he had made in Wall street.
