SUPERIOR COURT CASES.

Civil Term on this Week—The Duke Case Heard.

Durham superior court for the trial of civil actions has been in session this week. The attendance upon court has not been large owing to the fact that civil cases do not attract the attention that criminal cases attract. Judge W. J. Adams is presiding and his court runs smoothly.

The first case to come up was that of C. W. Page vs. the insurance department of the Jr. O. U. A. M. This case has been on docket since the death of Mr. C. W. Page in 1907. The issues at stake were such as to require an airing in court before the claim was paid, owing to the fact that Mr. Page paid in dues to the lodge after his sickness in order to be restored to good standing in the order. The full details of the matter were gone into and the jury decided that the claim should be paid.

Immediately following this case was that of a Texas bank vs. B. L. Duke. The bank is suing on notes given by Duke to Alice Webb and which notes afterward came into the possession of the bank. The amount of the notes in question is $4,049.25, this being one of four notes written by Mr. Duke about the same date. The other notes are now outstanding.

Former Durhamite Killed.

Bruce Harris, a former resident of Durham, was killed in Birmingham, Ala., last week by a detective, who was endeavoring to serve papers upon him.

From information sent out from the Alabama town, it seems that since Harris left Durham he had tried to build for himself a name for piety and right living and was succeeding, when the officers of law ran across him, and after a struggle he was shot by the detective that worked up the case, or rather that found the man.

Harris was known here as he was a brakeman on the Norfolk & Western railway between this station and Lynchburg, and the trouble that caused him to leave this section was over his faithless wife. He was known, until the time he attempted to shoot a man for intimacy with his wife, as a quiet man, and the accounts sent out from his adopted home indicate that he was living quiet and peaceable there.
