The difference between such men as Dowie and the common run of humanity is not one merely of degree. He had a faculty of which the rest of us are destitute. We do not under-take to say that this faculty was higher or lower than the ordinary abilities of mankind, but it was certainly different. In its highest de gree it has appeared very rarely Mohammed had it and so did Budtha, not to mention such moderns as Abdul Baha... Very likely none of them had this mysterious gift in such superabundance as Confucius. But it is manifested in an inferior degree by men who do not dream of founding new religions. Dowie had so much of the faculty that he was able to attract thousands around him and build a new city. But such men as "Get Rich Quick" Wallingford eases it to an extent by no means negligible. It is this faculty which enables them to beguile their fellows.
