POETRY.

THE CHANGE.

No more, no more, why should I dream,
Dreams that I know are vain!
Why hast thou fled, when the past
I would not let again!

All actions, 'tis the glittering wreath
Of some work in the east;
Pursues the most of shining course,
Ended ere well begun.

Hence, the fall a music, luring where
The green sward dwells;
And hence, a very mockery,
The dance of the foolish bells.

And yet, alas! for the food time
When I have loved all this—
Altho'g' thou art nothing but a dream,
At least thou'rt something to be missed.

The heart is like those fairy rings,
Where all of green has died;
Yet there, they say, the fairy race,
By moonlight's light is hid.

We hold to that gay creed no more,
Gone is the elixir reign;
Yet snugly such fair visions fled
Is more of loss than gain.

But then it is as years pass on,
Even with our own heart;
We see the vision, one by one,
Of early youth depart.

We gaze around—all is the same
O'er which our young eyes roved;
But—where for the heart and eye—
Quests, ourselves have changed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Warm Work.—Martinez, the incombustible Spaniard, as he is termed, made his promised appearance at the Theatre last night, but the house was not very numerously attended. The oven was well-constructed and occupied a space directly in the centre of the stage, with the mouth of it towards the pit. The process of heating it, which gave a genial glow to the whole house, being completed, Martinez made his appearance, habited in a large woollen great coat, trousers and a loose cap, which was pulled down over his ears, sometimes below his eyes, but never hiding any other part of the face. The heat of the oven, by Fahrenheit's thermometer, having been ascertained to be 250 degrees (about a fourth hotter than boiling water,) the Spaniard fearlessly let himself into the scorching cavity, and seated himself on a stool not far from the centre, remained there nearly five minutes, amusing himself by singing and holding on his head a tin of cakes, made from dough, and which were pretty well baked during the period mentioned. On leaving the oven the upper coat of the Spaniard was blackened generally, and crumbled at the touch to cinders. His pulse, at the time, was examined by Dr. King, and found to have risen to 215. He did not seem exhausted but perspired profusely. Seating himself he remained on the stage about a quarter of an hour, during which the additional fuel was consumed in the oven, the heat of which having been raised to 260 degrees of Fahrenheit, he again entered it as fearlessly as before, frequently calling out that he was comfortable and pleased with his situation. He remained in the oven this time two or three minutes longer than before, during which he drank a bottle of wine; but an omelet which was frying in a vessel on his head, was by an accident nearly destroyed. His appearance, on again leaving the oven, was similar to that previously stated. In about twenty minutes, no additional fuel having been used, he returned into it, and its mouth for a minute or two was stopped. On removing the wooden door, by a combination of chemicals, which, when unseen, he had himself ignited, his whole figure appeared as red hot—an effect astounding and impressively terrible to behold; the confined stench occasioned by it, if turned into a small stable, it is said would have suffocated a horse. At the close of his third baking he plunged himself into a reservoir of cold water, sinking for a short time, beneath its surface; and subsequently dripping like a mermaid, he rose from the fluid without assistance, and, with a smile playing on his features, made his final bow to the spectators. In the above exhibition, which is any thing but a pleasant one, decidedly there was no trick. It is proper however to observe, that between the bottom and the crown of the oven the space is seven or eight feet; and as heat ascends, the temperature of the upper and lower part of it must be very dissimilar; but enough of heat must remain any where within it to destroy life unless singularly guarded and by art rendered secure.

Brighton Gazette, Feb. 12.

A Hint to Young Ladies.—We feel some reluctance in telling, even to our professional readers, what we once met with; but it is an illustration of the evils of tight lacing, and we may therefore venture. At a large and somewhat formal dinner-party shortly before the ladies left the room, a loud report like that of a pistol, suddenly startled the whole company; conversation at once dropped—silence ensued—consternation sat on every countenance, and the guests whispered to each other all round the table, "What could that be?" At length the deep crimson blushes of a young lady fixed the eyes of every one upon her. It was not, however, till many weeks afterwards that the explanation of this singular phenomenon came out; and we had it, not from the young lady herself, but from "authority," that one of the flat steels of her stays situated over the region of the stomach, had suddenly snapped and thus given rise to the mysterious explosion.

Medical Gazette.

Valuable Anecdote.—The alarm which some ecclesiastics and others manifest at the idea of catholic emancipation, and the difficulty they have, or say they have, in seeing what others call the justice & propriety of such a measure, may be illustrated by the following circumstance. The late Rev Robert Robinson, the baptist minister at Cambridge, was in the habit of discussing the principles of dissent from the Church of England with some of the heads of houses at the University. One day, when the conversation was warm and Mr. R. was plying these gentlemen with his reasons for dissent, he could get no other answer than, "We can't see it." On this Mr. R. took his pencil, and wrote on a slip of paper the Greek word Theos (God,) and said, "Can you see that?" "Yes," was the reply. He then took from his pocket a gunnysack, with which he covered the word, and said, "Gentlemen can you see it now?" "No," was the answer. "The reason," replied Mr. R. is obvious."

A Friendly Pipe.—A few evenings since, a man was observed boring a hole in the door of the lock-up at Gateshead, Durham. His proceedings were watched, but not interrupted, as there was nothing to carry off, if he designed to break open the place. But his intentions were of a friendly nature. Putting a tobacco pipe through the hole, he filled the bowl of the pipe with tobacco, lighted it for the accommodation of a friend inside, who soon commenced puffing, and the man walked off.

Dog Stealing.—It seems to be the fashion of the day to consider dogs and umbrellas as the common property of mankind in general.—In reference to the propensity which many individuals have of appropriating to their own use, of every stray animal that happens to fall in their way, the following lines were written and engraved upon the brass necklace of a favourite dog.

Steal me not, myself and collar,
Both are barely worth a dollar,
Puppies should befriend each other,
See me home then, dearest brother.

Somebody asked Baron Rothschild to take venison. "No!" said the Baron, "I never eat venison. I don't think it is so good as mutton." "O!" said the Baron's friend, "I wonder at your saying so: if mutton were better than venison, why does venison cost so much more?" "Vy?" replied the Baron, "I will tell you vy—in dish world de peopel alwaysh prefer vat ish deer to vat ish sheep."

$100 Reward

WILL be paid for the apprehension of negro man Hughes (late the property of Mr. William Coffield dec'd) if taken without the State, or Fifty Dollars with all reasonable expenses if within, and delivered to me or confined in jail so that I get him. He ran away on or about the 23rd ult. without the slightest provocation whatever.—Said fellow is about 22 or 23 years of age, dark complexion, about 6 feet high, tolerably slim built, & has a scar on one side of his head, which is entirely bald, occasioned by a burn when quite young; he may however comb his hair in such a manner as to prevent its being observed, and probably will, as it is quite conspicuous when his hat is off. When spoken to he has a down look, but speaks loud and quick. It is probable he is in the neighborhood of Elizabeth City, where he once remained for 5 or 6 months in a similar case. Masters of vessels and all others are forbid harbouring, or carrying him off at their peril.

He had on, a fur Hat & black cassimere pantaloons both considerably worn. Sophia is about 20 years old 5 feet 4 or five inches high, they are both known in the neighborhood and also in the Town of Edenton, where it is probable they have bent their course. The above reward, as stated, will be paid for their delivery to me at my farm 12 miles above Edenton, near Mr. James Coffield's fishery.
