

he Baltimore republican. Bullet Proof: OR, THE MERO "WHO NEVER LOST A BATTLE." SLOW TIME-O no. I never mention HER. Oh, no, he never lost a right! He's ever bullet proof! For why? whene'er the buttle raged, He always kept sloof! He always kept aloof, my friends-And that's the reason why 'Old Tip,' Was always bullet proof!

Twas very cautious in Old Tip, Twas very brave and fair-The more the British foes came on, The more he was'nt there! The more he was'nt there my friends, He always kept aloof; And thut's the reason why Old Tip Wes always bullet proof!

Twas very lucky for him too, It was, indeed-indeed-The more he did'nt get a wound, The more he did'nt bleed! The more he did'nt bleed my friends-He always kept aloof; And that's the reason why Old Tip Was always buliet proof.

But when retreating through the woods, And through the tangled fern, He tere his mus'nt mention-'ems, And had to put on her n; And had to put on hern my friends-He always kept aboof; And that's the reason why Old Tip Was always bullet proof!

And thus the war-path did he tread, Through all that fearful fray; But always (as old settlers said,) He ran the other way. He ran the other way my friends-He always kept aloof; And that's the reason why Old Tip Was always bullet proof.

But he has high authority To thus proserve his tallow, For Fa'staff says-"discretion is The better part of valor." The better part of valor, friends ... He always kept aloof; And that's the reason who Old Tip Was always bullet proof.

For oft his gallant troops, 'tis said, Paternally he'd tell, To "stand a little farther off, And they could see as well!" And they could see as well my friends .. He always kept aloof; And that's the reason why Old Tip Was always bullst proof!

And thus this mighty General, Through all that bloody wer, Escaped with bare a bramble scra'ch, His sels and only scar! His sole and only scar my friends-He always kept aloof; And that's the reason why Old Tip Was always bullet proof.

Battle of the Ranch.

The people of that part of Mexico known as the Department of Santa Fe, have for many years been harrassed and annoyed by the depredations of the Apachus Indians. An American by the name of Kurker, at the time of our visit, had just entered into a contract with the Government to whip the Indians and bring them to a permanent treaty, for the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, five thousand of which was paid to him in advance to commence operations. Kurker is now carrying on the war, and his first skirmish occurred while we were in Toas, within two miles of the town at which we were sojourning. He is a man of daring and reckless disposition, who has himself suffered from the villainy of the Indians, and he now hunts them as much in revenge for the injuries they have done him, as in prospect of emolu-

The battle which forms the subject of the present sketch, occurred close under the black mountain of Tons, in the valley of the same name, near a small town called the 'Ranch.' Kurker, with about fifty men, was here en-camped, when a party of the thieveing Apachus crept upon them in the night and stole a number of their horses.

The Indians were not aware that Kurker's party were prepared for war, but supposed they were stealing from an encampment of traders. who would not dare to pursue them. The robbery had scarcely been committed when it was discovered, and in a very few moments more, Kurker and his fifty men were in close pursuit of the Indians. Knowing that the thieves would endeavor to escape over the mountains, by ascending a ravine that opened into the valley near the spot where the robbery was committed, Kurker led his men quickly round a by-path up the mountain side and as the grey-light of morning spread over the valley, the pursuers found themselves upon an eminence commanding the ravine up which the Indians were hurrying, mounted upon the stolen horses. The marauders numbered a hundred and twenty, more than double the force of the pursuing party; but al-though these vagabonds hold the Spaniards in great contempt, they are the vilest cowards when opposed by the Americans. Comping when opposed by the Americans. Cunning as they were they did not discover their danger until fifty American rifles were levelled. each with deadly aim, at a seperate victim. The first cry of alarm from the Indians was PORTRAIT PAINTER, the signal to fire, and as the early sunbeam strated the ravine, echo started suddenly

| danger .- Twenty Indians fell from their horses at the fire, some with a single frightful yell expiring on the instant, while others with clenched teeth, and with the desperate energy of departing life, clung to the reins, and were dragged about and trod upon by the alarmed horses. The Indians ride like devils, and without pausing an instant they turned and fled towards the valley .- Some that were wounded fell from the frightened animals while they were in full speed down the ravine. Kurker and his men followed without reloading their rifles, and chased the Indians until they emerged from the ravine, and took ref-

Into this square the Indians rushed and endeavored to taught to believe that the sacred roof is protection against all danger. But Kurker's men felt no disposition to let the savages off so easily, and reloading their rifles they resumed the attack within the walls of the town. It was still early morning, and the inhabitants sprang from their beds in the wildest confusion and alarm. First was heard the thronging of the Indians into the town-their murmurs of fear and terror; then the shouts of the pursuers; children screamed within the dwellings, and there was a rapid closing and barring of doors and windows. Then came the report of fire arms, followed by the most fiendish screams and yells from the victims, over which again rose the loud hurrahs of the Americans, as wild and savage as the dreadfol war whoop of the Indians. The men seemed to grow delirious with the excitement and to become juspired with the savage nature of their enemies. One man after discharging his rifle and pistols rushed madly among the Indians with his knife, and actually succeeded in taking a scalp before he was killed. -The fight lasted but balf an hour, when the Indians begged for mercy and were suffered Kurker's men are mostly robust, daring fellows from Kentucky and Missouri, wagoners, speculators who yielded to the seductions of the Mounte Bank and were ruined men of rough, yet chivalrous and romantic natures, who love the wild life they are leading. Their pay from Kurker is a dollar a day and half the booty, so that their interest as well as their love of excitement leads them to make battle whenever opportunity occurs. In this battle 40 Indians were killed, and in Kurker's party but one American and one half breed. The stolen horses were recovered, and all the ania powerful army.

"Life is short: the poor pittance of seventy matters it if your neighbour lies interred in a splendid tomb, sleep you with innocence.-Look behind you through the tracks of time, a vast desert of unnumbered ages lies open in the retrospect; through this desert have your forefathers journeyed on, until, wearied STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA. with years and sorrow, they sunk from the walk of man. Down the hollow legs wires were run to the floor, and along the floor in grooves made for the purpose, to Court at office in Clinton, the third Monday in the wall, then to the third story, thence to a May Anno Domini 1840, and 64th of American the wall, then to the third story, thence to a point immediately above the centre of the table. The wires were communicated from the table to the point above in the manner used in bell hanging. The grooves through which they run were inlaid with the softest buckskin so as to prevent a noise in pulling them; the grooves were then covered over with thin copper and a carpet screened all from view-the grooves in the wall were papered over so as to prevent detection. Immediately above the card table the ceiling was ornamented with a circuler painting; after the fashion of some detected from below, because they represented certain portions of the figures of the painting. When a party was engaged at play, a person above could look down upon the hands and by pulling the wires give his partner at the ta-

The clerks in the establishment, we understand, were not allowed access to the card room or the room above. The Remains of Napoleon Benaparte. The government of France having determined on the removal of the body of Bonaparte from St. Helena to that country, to receive a pompous funeral, the public attention is much attracted to the subject, and consequently the following account of the remains, and the coffins in which they were deposited, may prove interesting. It consists of a Memorandum concerning the Demise of General Bonaparte," written by Sergeant Nillington, then of the St. Helena Artillery. who, as will be seen, took the most active part in the ceremony he describes so minutely. He says-"On Sunday, the 6th of May, 1821, the day after the General's death, I was exof a gigantic mountain, and is watered by a pressly sent for, while attending divine serpoleon Bonaparte. On Monday, the 7th, I was ordered to attend at longwood house for the purpose of soldering up the body of Gen. Bonaparte in the tin coffin, which was performed in the following manner, in the presence force their way into the church, having been of Generals Bertrand and Montholon, Madame Bertrand, the French surgeon, Mr. A. Darling, Dr. Rushop, of his Majesty's twentieth regiment of Foot, several of the French domestics, and Samuel Ley, a private in the 20th Regiment. The body of General Napoleon Bouaparte, attired in full uniform, was deposited in a tin coffin, the inside being lined with white silk and cotton; His cocked hat was laid across his thighs, and on the left breast of his coat were a gold star and cross, and several other medals of the same metal; several pieces of coin of various sizes and different values were also put into the coffin. His heart was deposited in a silver urn or tureen filled with spirits, to which I soldered a lid or cover of the same naterial, which was placed between the small parts of his legs. His stomach was deposited in a silver mug, in which there were spirks, which was also put into the coffin. A silver plate, knife, fork and spoon, and a silver service cup, were also deposited in the coffin. Previously to placing the body of the General in the coffin the tin lid of the coffin being lined with white silk and stuffed with cotton, it was put in its place, and I soldered it on the coffic, enclosing the late General Napoleon Bonsparte, and all the above mentioned articles. This tin coffin, with its contents was then enclosed in a mahogany coffin, and they were enclosed in a lead coffin, and all were afterwards enclosed in a mahogany coffin, which made, in
