Fayetteville FEMALE SEMINARY.

HAVING declined further supervision of the FEMALE SEMINARY, it is but just that I should express to its former patrons and friends my confidence, that in the hands of Mr. Spencer, it will be conducted with ability and faithfulness, on the general plan heretofore pursued. Mr. Spencer changed from time of entrance to close of session, and no deduction made for absence, except in cases of sickness.

THE Subscriber will open the Seminary on the 15th of October next, and hopes by giving his entire and exclusive attention to the business—aided in each department by competent, efficient FEMALE TEACHERS—to merit the patronage heretofore bestowed. In regard to the plan he intends to pursue, he has only to say, at present, that he is DETERMINED to give a course of instruction in each department as THOROUGH as possible. The Academic year will be the same as before, commencing on the 15th of October, and closing on the 15th July, and divided into two sessions. Pupils charged from time of entrance to close of session, and no deduction made for absence, except in cases of sickness.

LAND! LAND! LAND!

I NOW offer for sale a very valuable farm on the Eastern side of Cape Fear River in the county of Bladen, about 16 miles below the Town of Fayetteville, and immediately on the River. There are 760 acres of land (five 1/2 surveys), and 12 acres of back land joining the same. About 250 acres were in cultivation the present year, and there are suitable buildings for the convenience of the farm. Persons are requested to examine the same before the crop is housed, as they can then judge properly of its production. It is unnecessary to say it is a first-rate farm, as all will be satisfied of that fact when they see it. Terms will be made to suit the convenience of the purchaser. JOHN T. GILMORE, Fayetteville, Oct. 31, 1840. 85-4f

FIVE DOLLARS REWARD.
RAN OFF on the 22d inst., from my residence on the Cape Fear River, 8 miles above Fayetteville, my negro man A. PHILL. He is a little bright complexioned, with thick bushy hair, very bow-legged, when walking rocks very much, and has a great impediment in his speech, particularly when frightened. Said boy is about five feet five or six inches high, and weighs about 145 lbs.; aged about 30 years. The above reward will be paid for his delivery to me at my residence, or for confining him in any jail so that I get him again, and all reasonable expenses paid. It is more than probable that he may make an attempt to go to Mr. Archd. McRae's, Boheson County, near Gilchrist's bridge, who owns one of his brothers, whither he has made the attempt to go heretofore.

Male and Female Departments.

WE have the pleasure to announce to the public, that the exercises of this Institution commenced on Monday the 5th inst., under the superintendence of Mr. and Mrs. Mc NEILL, whose qualifications to manage such a Seminary, we have had a fair opportunity of testing, as they have both taught for us since last winter, and given general satisfaction to all connected with the school. Mrs. McNeill, (formerly Miss Bassell) brought with her, from her native State, New York, high testimonials of her scholarship. Mr. McNeill is a native of our own State, and a graduate of our own University. He discharged the duties of Tutor in the same for a Session, and is well qualified for the instruction of youth, who wish to prepare for College, (this being one of the primary objects of the school) and, also, to fit young men for the business of teaching. Strict attention will be paid to the morals of the pupils. Board can be had convenient to the school at $6 per month. This Institution is situated in a healthy region of country.

The Academic year is divided into two Sessions of five months each.

Plantation FOR SALE.

THE SUBSCRIBER has a wish to move to the West, and offers for sale his plantation where he now resides, lying between the waters of Carver's and McPherson's Creeks, about 75 miles north of Fayetteville. There is about 75 acres of cleared land, and all under a good fence, and about 45 or 50 acres of the same newly cleared, and in good soil to produce well. There are on the place, a large dwelling house, kitchen, and all other necessary and convenient out buildings. Any person wishing to buy a plantation, and a graduate of our own University, is invited to examine for themselves. There is also a creek running through the land with water sufficient to saw thro' the winter and Spring.

THIS ESTABLISHMENT will be open after the 1st of August, under the management and direction of the Subscriber. The House has been thoroughly repaired, and will, in a few days, be well furnished; and every effort will be made to render it worthy of patronage.
EDWARD YARBROUGH, August 3, 1839. 23-1f

THE Augusta Chronicle (weekly,) Raleigh Register and Standard, Wilmington Advertiser, Greensborough Patriot, Salisbury Watchman, and Orange Gazette will insert the above three months and forward their accounts to the subscriber. E. Y.

We lay the following correspondence of the Baltimore Sun before our readers, for their information no less than to correct a very prevalent, and equally erroneous opinion, that the clerkships in the General Post Office Department are what are called "fat births." We know from personal knowledge that since Mr Kendall had the supervision of the Department, the clerks have, during the session of Congress, worked with lighted candles, after dark.

WASHINGTON CITY, Oct. 26th, 1840.

A hasty glance at the operations of the General Post Office Departments, and of the sixth Auditor's office, (for they are as closely connected as the Siamese twins,) is sufficient to convince any one that the clerkships in either, are any thing but sinecures. The former is certainly one of the most important and complex under the government. It binds the whole social compact together. In its operations, embracing, as it does, the whole map of the country—penetrating the vast wilderness, to the farthest verge of civilization—the merchant, the mechanic, the farmer, the parent and child, all classes and conditions of society have a common interest. Besides the thousands of miles travelled on railroads and in steamboats, how many more are traversed in four horse post coaches on the main roads, which form the great travelling thoroughfare, from one extreme of the country to another; then how many in stages, on roads of less importance; and then the thousands more which wind their devious way over the wide waste, or through the thickly settled forest; over the sandy plain, or through the deep "Dismal Swamp;" and all so arranged as to lead out from the main roads and intersect with each other. On all these routes great and small, separate contracts are made, with the times of arrival and departure affixed to each, so that each may arrive at the place of its destination in time to meet the pending mail for some other direction. The preparation, offering of proposals, lettings, general correspondence, keeping of route registers, contracts, to say nothing of the immense labor attending a single change, which may be required, affecting the routes, probably through an entire section of the country, is certainly a most gigantic business, requiring a thorough geographical knowledge of the whole country, intelligence, decision, and the most patient and persevering application to business.

This branch of the department, I am informed, is under the charge of Major S. R. Hobbs, first assistant P. M. General, aided by William H. Dundas, Esq., principal clerk. Look over the map of America, and, in your imagination, see the whole face of it studied over with post offices, amounting to about fourteen thousand, at each of which there is a postmaster appointed; and the same routine of business is, of course, performed with the most diminutive and profitless as with the largest and most profitable. In the establishment of these offices, much correspondence is necessary to ascertain the precise location, route, &c. &c., upon which an office should be located, more especially in the new States and territories. I think I can imagine an enquiry of the department, relative to the location of the intended office, replied to by some unlettered person, who had signed a petition for it, replying that "said office should be in range No.—," said by some to be east by southeast, and, as near as I can guess, about—miles from any other office," &c. &c. The changes made necessary by removal, death, or inattention to business, all added to the current amount of labor, show conclusively, that the business of this branch is highly responsible, perplexing, and requires no ordinary amount of industry. It is under charge of Robert Johnston, Esq., second assistant Postmaster General, whose principal clerk is E. L. Childs, Esq.—The business of the inspection office is, however, not less onerous or responsible than either of the former. Registers are here kept of all the arrivals and departures of the mails; and the postmasters are required to report the same regularly at stated periods. If the postmasters neglect this part of their duty, this branch of the department reports them to the appointment office for removal. The fidelity or faithfulness of contractors is here recorded; and the latter punished with fines, according to the amount of injury sustained in consequence of their remissness or negligence. During the winter season—seasons of bad roads, high waters, &c., I can easily imagine that the business of this division is greatly augmented, so that, in one sense, the clerks are as dependent on the elements for comfort and regularity in their business, as are the mariners, who are tossed about on the billows. I am informed that whilst every case of delinquency is considered, each contractor has an opportunity afforded him of showing how it occurred, whether through carelessness of himself or agent. It is apparent, then, that it requires a mind of superior discrimination to decide upon the amount of fine to be deducted from their pay, so that the delinquent may not suffer material injury, but be kept constantly in mind of his responsibilities to the department. This branch is under the direction of Col. Daniel Coleman, third assistant postmaster general, assisted by Joseph Perry, Esq., principal clerk. There is another division, I am informed, under the direction of the chief clerk, John Marron, Esq., in which records are kept of all decisions made by the postmaster general, together with his correspondence, all business connected with mail depositions, instructions to special agents of the department, &c. I was next conducted to the "dead letter office." This presents a most singular appearance to the eye of a stranger. Here are thousands and tens of thousands of letters, brought together from every part of the country, presenting an endless variety of shapes and sizes in the folding; whilst, perhaps, there are hardly three hands-writing in a thousand, precisely alike. In this pile of letters, now called dead, are inscribed sentiments of the purest and warmest affection. Here is one, written in a plain, old-fashioned style, ink very black, and letters large, appearing to have been wet with tears of the writer; it is from a mother (bless the endearing name!) in Ireland, to her son in America. It appears the young man had shouldered his axe and gone out to the tall forest trees of the western wilds. Oh, what solicitude is here expressed—what advice, and the letter closes with a benediction from the warmhearted mother.

Then comes an hundred circular letters, about the schemes and drawing of lotteries, and schemes of other kinds of business—here is a letter from an enterprising young man to his mother, from one of the new territories, whether he had travelled, all the way from the Granite State, a few years since, "to seek his fortune," he tells her that he "has set up school," has been appointed postmaster—complains of the scarcity of fruit, and requests the good old lady to send him "a peck of good pippin apples," by the first conveyance, and also states that he "left his yarn stockings behind."

My curiosity being increased by the discoveries I had made, I run my eye along the pile, and perceived a heavy package, weighing several ounces, by the indication in red ink, on the outside, and amounting to several dollars postage. I shrewdly suspected that this was a small part of the sub-treasury, which had, by some means, got out of its regular course, and found its way into this regular course of dead letters; upon the clerk opening it, however, it proved to be four epithets, which some manufacturer had enclosed to the President of a Railroad Company, as a sample of some he had just finished. The opening of another large parcel disclosed a present from a devoted mother, to her daughter, perhaps an hundred miles distant, in the shape of night caps, pillowcases, &c. &c., neatly and beautifully arranged.

One more example, and I will close. It is from a young lady, who signs her name "Emily," to a young gentleman, to whom, in a few weeks, she is to be united in the bonds of "holy wedlock." What beautiful writing! how chaste and free in conception! how neatly is every thought expressed! What calculations for future happiness (heaven grant that they may be all realized) and how neatly is folded and superscribed, the seal bearing this significant motto "We part—to meet again."

In a pile of letters, such as I witnessed, who can imagine the effort of mind and genius exercised in their production. I was informed that, by an estimate made not long since, upwards of 250,000 dead letters are opened each quarter of a year. It is well known that all the branches of this extensive department, are under the care and superintendence of the Hon. John M. Niles, postmaster-general, who is reputed to be a most indefatigable officer.

Political.

From the Baltimore Republican.
The Mask must now Fall.

The great political drama (farce) which has been played by the federal party, being concluded, the disguise which they have used in the performance of their respective parts must now be laid aside; and those who have taken part in the play will be compelled to appear in their real characters. The delusion must vanish—the humbuggery be revealed, and the great mass, who have been deceived by every species of trickery, will open their eyes, and discover the means which have been resorted to, for the purpose of misleading their judgments from the investigation of the real intentions of those who have so successfully enacted the parts for which they were cast. No longer can they play too characters—one adapted to the predilections of the South, and another to suit the inclinations and taste of the North. The chief character in the drama, the President elect, will, in a few months from this time, be compelled, from the nature of his station, to drop the mask which has hid his real sentiments and policy from the public. The cardinal principles upon which the government is to be administered, can no longer be concealed—they must be developed to the public view. He can no longer rely upon the "generous confidence" of the people; that confidence can only be secured by a knowledge of and acquiescence in the measures and policy which will be pursued. There can be no longer secret promises made to the South, and others given to the North, diametrically opposite to each other; but all must come out; the ass must doff the lion's skin, and that which has been so studiously kept from view for party effect, must appear in its legitimate character and natural deformity. The position which the chosen head of the federal party must now occupy, is so elevated that no cunningly devised veil can be thrown over him to conceal his principles from the public gaze. The whole nation—the East, the West, the North, and the South—all, will have an uninterrupted view—a no political ledgerman or party machinery, can any longer bewilder or deceive; no loud humbug for 'T' and
