Encourage Home Manufactures.
Sisters should be always willing to walk, ride, visit with their brothers, and esteem it a privilege to be their companions. It is worth while to learn innocent games for the sake of furnishing home the most agreeable place to them. If your brothers take an interest in your personal appearance and dress, you should encourage the feeling by consulting their taste, and sacrificing any little fancy of your own to a decided dislike of theirs. Brothers will generally be found strongly opposed to the slightest indecorum in sisters; even those who are ready enough to take advantage of freedom of manners in other girls, have very strict notions with regard to their own sisters. Their intercourse with all sorts of men enables them to judge of the construction put upon certain actions, and modes of dress and speech, much better than women can; and you will do well to take their advice on all such points.

THE RELATION OF BROTHERS AND SISTERS.
The important relation which exists between brothers and sisters, cannot be appreciated without a greater knowledge of the world and the duties of young men, than girls to the world, and to believe in the importance of this matter, and to believe that you would beg you to profit by my observations on this matter, and to believe that you should encourage them to be perfect.

From Arthur's Ladies' Book, THE RELATION OF BROTHERS AND SISTERS. The important relation which exists between brothers and sisters, cannot be appreciated without a greater knowledge of the world and the duties of young men, than girls to the world, and to believe in the importance of this matter, and to believe that you would beg you to profit by my observations on this matter, and to believe that you should encourage them to be perfect.

If your brothers are young men, and you are in the habit of visiting them, encourage them to be perfect. If your sisters are young ladies, and you are in the habit of visiting them, encourage them to be perfect.

If you are so happy as to have elder brothers, you should be equally assiduous in cultivating their friendship, though the advances must of course be differently made. As they have long been accustomed to treat you as a child, you may meet with some repulses when you aspire to become a companion and a friend; but do not be discouraged by this. The earlier maturity of girls, will soon render you their equal in sentiment, if not in knowledge, and your ready sympathy will soon convince them of it. They will be agreeably surprised when they find their former playmate and younger become their quick-sighted and intelligent companion, understanding at a glance what is passing in their hearts; and love and confidence on your part will soon be repaid in kind. Young men often feel the want of a confidential friend of the softer sex, to sympathize with them in their little affairs of sentiment, and happy are those who find one in a sister.

Once possessed of an elder brother's confidence, spare no pains to preserve it; convince him, by the little sacrifices of personal convenience and pleasure which you are willing to make for him, that when you do oppose his wishes, it is on principle and for conscience' sake; then will you be a blessing to him, and even when differing from you, he will love and respect you the more for your adherence to a high standard.

So many temptations beset young men, of which young women know nothing, that it is of the utmost importance that your brothers' evenings should be happily passed at home, that their friends should be your friends, that their engagements should be the same as yours, and that various innocent amusements should be provided for them in the family circle. Music is an accomplishment, chiefly valuable as a home enjoyment, as rallying round the piano the various members of the family, and harmonizing their hearts as well as voices, particularly in devotional strains. I know no more agreeable and interesting spectacle, than that of brothers and sisters playing and singing together those elevated compositions, in music and poetry which gratify the taste and purify the heart, whilst their fond parents sit delighted by. I have seen and heard an elder sister thus leading the family choir, who was the soul of harmony to the whole household, and whose life was a perfect example of those virtues which I am here endeavoring to inculcate. Let no one say, in reading this chapter, that too much is here required of sisters, that no one can be expected to load such a self-sacrificing life; for the sainted one to whom I refer, was all that I would ask any sister to be, and a happier person never lived. "To do good and make others happy," was her rule of life; and in this she found the art of making herself so.

If your brothers take an interest in your personal appearance and dress, you should encourage the feeling by consulting their taste, and sacrificing any little fancy of your own to a decided dislike of theirs. We warrant our work, as usual, for one year.
Repairing neatly executed at short notice and at reduced prices.
Aug. 10, 1844. 239-ly.

Brothers and sisters may greatly aid each other in the study of their friends of the opposite sex. Brothers can throw important light upon the character and merits of young men, whose names when acting out their duties in the world, are considered, and selected from the train of the drawing-room; and you can in return, greatly assist your sisters in coming to a just conclusion concerning their female friends. You may be very much indebted to the quick observation of women into each other's characters, and saved by your discernment from being misled by qualities that are not so valuable as they appear to be.

If your brothers are young men, and you are in the habit of visiting them, encourage them to be perfect. If your sisters are young ladies, and you are in the habit of visiting them, encourage them to be perfect.

If you are so happy as to have elder brothers, you should be equally assiduous in cultivating their friendship, though the advances must of course be differently made.
