county, on reasonable terms. Besides being generally adopted in the Northern States, these wheels are coming into general use in the southern States. We have sold about 100 Rights, 30 of which are in successful operation in Cumberland county. These wheels are more durable, and more easily kept in order when properly put together than the flutter wheel. They will save one-third of the water, and ruu well in back water, when there is a head above. The speed of the saw is increased to more than double the strokes per minute. We refer, am ng others, to the following gentlemen, some of whom have had the wheels in operation 12 months or more; and from many of them. and others, we have received certificates expressing their high approbation of the superior advantages of these over the flutter wheel, and stating that their saws will cut 2500, 3000, 3500, and even as high as 5000 feet per day, and save one-third of

ODON'T YOU WANT TO BUY SOME SNAIX ?" A short time since, as one of our steamboats we: I wending her way to the head of navigation, she 'brought up' at an 'intermediate port' between this place and the junction of the Chattahoochee and Flint river, for the purpose of 'wooding' or landing freight .-As soon as she had touched the bank, 'bow line' made fast and plank out, she was boardby one of those not very rare specimens of humanity, a full grown, live 'hoosier,' bearing all the outward marks and signs which designate the 'green-horn' genius. - Only waiting till the noise made by blowing off steam had ceased, with his hat drawn down on his eyes and his arms firmly buried to the elbows in his 'trowserlooms' pockets, he marched resolutely up to the clerk of the boat, and in a loud, uncultivated tone inquired, 'if he didu't want to buy a young rattle-stuik?"

The clerk, like most of the boys on our steamboats, being particularly foud of a joke, and knowing his man,' immediately conceived a plan by which some fun might be had in these dull and unpropitions times of scarce freights and low prices. Assuming an air 'as serious as a judge,' he propounded to the snake man many questions as to the size, age, color and order of his reptile, gravely remarking, after all his interrogatories had been answered satisfactorily, that he was not just then in the snake market hunself, but that there was a commercial house in Apolachicola who were loading a ship for Liverpool, and that part of the cargo was to consist of a rare collection of beasts, birds, and reptiles; that every thing curious was in great demand, and snakes, if they were the real pizen, would readily bring from fifteen to twenty dollars a head.' The hoosier, elated with the thought of what a haudsome sum he could make, thanked the clerk profoundly for his information, and immediately set out for home, where he go to 'ketching suaix.' By the time the next bost passed that way bound for this po t, he had succeeded'in capturing, alive and unharmed, a barrel of the most poisonous serpents, embracing every variety and bue that crawled by applying to the Hor. Robert Strange, James C in his 'diggins;' the adder, the moccasin, the rattle-snake, &c., &c., of all ages and sizes. Having them placed on board the boat, regularly 'shipped in good order and well-conditioned, marked and numbered as in the margin, and to be delivered at the port of Apalachicola, to Messis B. & H.' (as per direction of the clerk aforesaid,) he paid bis passage and took them in his own care, to make their delivery doubly certain. As soon as he had arrived here, his first inquiry was for the location of the above firm, having found which he presented himself with all the dignity of a man engaged in legitimate trade, stated the information he had received from the steamboat clerk, and desired that his snakes should be put at ouce upon the market. Understanding the hoax at once, and determining not to spoil the fun, Messrs H. & B. regretted that they had just titled their last rder for snakes, but had no doubt they would meet with ready sale, as there were several houses in the trade,' and he was directed to one of these. By this time the news became general, and every body knew that there was a snake-vender in town, and all bad a disposition to humor the joke.' Rending the signs as he went along, our snake friend soon presented himself at another counter and de manded if they didn't want to buy some sunix?' Here he was interrogated with business-like gravity, as to age, size and species. to which he replied that 'they were of all sizes, little, middlin', and big ; old, young, and middle-aged; spreadin adders, copperbellied, high-land and water moccasins; striped and yaller rattle-snakes; but they were all the real genuine picen, warranted to bite it they could, and to kill if they bit.' These were 'just the kind they had wanted, and they were extremely sorry he had not arrived a day or two earlier, as it was probable they might glad of so good an opportunity of furnishing their friends in Liverpool with such a variety of poisonous serpents;' and to this house he was directed. In this way the poor, upsuspecting, unsophisticated snake-catcher, was driven from house to house, from number to number, until at last, as the day began to wane, and the prospects of a sale to grow dim, he presented himself, with flushed face and perspiring forehead, to the Captain of one of ow vessels, who he had been told, would probably take the whole lot, at a fair price, and asked, in a despairing and almost suppliant tone, " don't you want to buy my snaig?'-The Captain was prepared for the question-the joke had reas hed its climax-and au unaffected, irresistible rour of laughter broke from the crowd who had collected to hear his last appeal. The snake man stood aghast, the very intends carrying on making and repairing guns, picture of offer aniszement and wonder; but pistole, and locks of all kinds. Also, repairing verdant as he was, a ray of light broke in upon dwelling house locks, keys, spring botts, knobs, umbrellas, parasols, canes, androns, pocket knives, him, and he began to understand that be had been most completely taken in. If any doubts still lingered around his obtuse totellert, they were effectually removed by the remarks of the crowd. "Well," said he, after pansing awhile as if to bring his mind to a focus spon the extent of his wrongs-" Well I h's a d-d mean trick, any how, to serve a feller. Here I've Hundred Acres of Pine Land, situated in had three niggers two days a ketchin' snaix, takin' a right o' pains to get 'em whbout a b-uise or a scratch - run the resk of being bit by the blasted, pizen things-paid three dollars to come down on the d-d old boat, deck passage, at that, and the danger of bustin' up thrown in-paid thirty-seven-and-a-half cents freight on the barrel-lost three days' work myself, and wore my legs a most off a rampiu' over your ister shells and sand-go your nasty fleas all over me a-biting'-and haint sold nary snaik! It's a low-life trick any way you can fix it, and that's what a feller gits by having any dealin's with your steambout clerks and your town people-the outling set set in all creation! I'll chop every anaik's head off, and take 'em back home, for they shouldn't crawl in such a dod-rotted place on this is!" - And the "green 'un" was dawnright savage. To appease his wrath, however, "the boys" treated to the best the town afforded; made up a subscription to pay his passage back bome again, in the cabin; and promised never to buy a suake from any body but him, because he produced the real pizen breed. Having put his threat of behending the sersents into execution, so left our city on return much better humor than could have been expected, declaring, however, most roundly to the last, that "he'd never believe a d-d steambest clerk agin as he lived, and that he had usade his first and last trip to Apala-

VILLAGE BELLS .- I was induced to ascend into the belfiy, where I found ropes for eight hells—those musical tones which extend the sphere of the church's influence by associations of pleasure, devotion, or melancholy, through the surrounding country. What an effective means of increasing the sympathies of religion, and exciting them by the firesides and on the very pillows of the people! Who that, as a bride or bridegroom, has beard them, in conjunction with the first joys of wedded lave, does not feel the pleasurable associations of their lively peal on other similar events? Who, that through a series of vents has obeyed their calling chime on the Sabbath morning, as the signal of placid feelings towards his God, and his assembled neighbors, does not hear their weekly monotony with devotion? And who is there that has performed the last rites of friendship, or the melancholy duties of son, daughter, husband, wife, father, mother, brother, eister, under the recurring tones of the awful tenor, or more awful dumb peal, and does not feel at every repetition of the samo ceremony, a revival of his keen but unavailing regrets for the mouldering dead? Things have remained for some time in this situation, at once as critical and so delightful, and all parties seemed afraid, by a single word, to break the heart which held them in their places; but such a state is not made to endure long; the march of human time goes on; its law is to leave nothing unchanged; and while the orast would fondly eling to the fragile bliss of the present, it finds itself left behind, sighing in vain after what is gone forever. MIND. - The mind which, like the delleste leaves of the mimosa, shrinks from every touch, is ill calculated to solicit the assistance of the ouwerful, or to gain the favor of the great. The very looks of the presperous it construes into arrogance; and it is equally wounded by the civility which appears to condescend, and by the insidence which wears the form of con-
