She continued to go before the wind for a lew furlongs, and then, grounding upon the low icebergs, remained motionless.

Capt. Warren's curiosity was so much excited, that he immediately leaped into his boat with several seamen, and rowed towards her. On approaching, he observing that her hull was miserably weather beaten, and not a soul appeared on deck, which was covered with snow to a considerable depth. He hailed her crew several times; but no answer was returned. Previous to stepping on board, an open port hole near the main chains cought his eye, and on looking into it he preceived a man reclining back on a chair, with writing materials on a table before him but the feebleness of the light made every thing very indistinct.
