Mr Webster shall give us his opinion of Gen. Cass, very soon after this, together with his reasons for opposing him. But first let us see a brief statement of Mr Webster's own position and policy, and that of the whig party, in regard to the fact. It is now more just and more that great and capital question of the extension over new realms of our republican system of selfgovernment-in other words, the question of our national growth:

That proposition he introduced in the form of a resolution into Congress, and I believe that every whig in Congress but one voted for it. But the senators belonging to the locofoco or democratic party voted against it. The senators from New York voted against it. One of the senators from Maine, Gen. Cass of the United States; and it is one of the from the free State of Michigan, Mr Fairmost honorable tributes paid to him, that field from Maine, Mr Niles from Connecby that assembly of good and wise men he was selected to preside over their deliberations. And he put his name first and fore- - some of them very prominent, and most to the constitution under which we friends of Mr Van Buren, and ready to take live. President Harrison was bred a sol- the field for him-these very gentlemen dier, and at different periods of his life voted not to exclude territory that should rendered important military services. But be obtained by conquest. They were will-President Harrison, nevertheless, was, for ing to bring in the territory, and then have a squabble and controversy whether it ed in civil than in military service. For should be slave or free territory. I was twenty years he was either Governor of of opinion that the true and safe policy was to shut out the whole question, hy the territory, member of one or the other getting no territory, and thereby keep off the controversy. The territory will do us South in the Senate, even if it be free. Let us keep it out, therefore. But no.

"But gentlemen, in an important crisis This is candid, and has force in it which will who was a convert to the Roman Catholic proposition was made to exclude him from the throne. Some said that was a very
