30TH CONGRESS. SECOND SESSION.

In the House, the only important business of general interest, was the bill introduced by MI Dixon, to abolish the franking privilege. The bill was read twice, but was laid over for discussion. After passing a resolution granting the use of the Hall to the Colonization Society, the House adjourned.

This substitute gives the consent of Congress to the admission of California and New Mexico as one State, provided the people thereof desire to be so admitted; and reserves to Congress the right of property in the public domain in that territory. It makes it incumbent upon the acting Governor of California, immediately after the passage of said act, to take the necessary steps for providing a State Constitution, and all the necessary paraphernalia of State sovereignty. In the mean time, the laws of the United States, so far as they are applicable, shall be extended

It was passed over informally, and ordered to and New Mexico, and to grant donation rights, and provide for the survey of the lands in said territories, was then taken up. This is the bil that Mr Lenton made a two hours speech on, or the 15th, and Mr Breese to-day replied to it But as neither of these speeches are of any interest to the readers of the Carolinian, we pass them by. Mr Breese, however, spoke but a short time, and was not particularly anxious to show

The bill was recommitted to the committee who reported it. A private claim in favor of Cadwallader Wallace was then passed, and th

Senate went into executive session. The proceedings of the House were of no interest. January 17. The Senate to-day, was engaged on the bill to reduce the rates of postage. This is a fruitful theme, and the Senators generally took a hand in the discussion. A proposition having been made to give the Judges of the U. S. Supreme Court the franking privilege on their business communications, Mr Foote, of Mississippi, opposed it very strongly, and took occasion to review the conduct of Judge McLean, in writing political letters. To be sure, the review was a little out of place, but it was a most scorching invective, and was richly merited by the officious pretender. In fact, we have laid it by for future publication.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., JANUARY 27. 1849.

In the House, the resolutions from the Legislature of New York, in opposition to the extension of slavery, &c., were read, laid upon the table, and ordered to be printed.

The civil and diplomatic appropriation bill was taken up for discussion, and a number of amendments offered and discussed, only one of which was adopted: the one reducing the mileage of members to ten cents per mile by the nearest travelled route, and to pay them $2000 per annum, instead of $8 per day. This amendment, although it was adopted, will amount to nothing, because an amendment to an appropriation bill is not the proper way of making an alteration. It seems to be a hard matter to find out what the mileage of a member is. Some set it down at 40 cents per mile, including all expenses; but that would not make the amount drawn by some of them.

January 18. In the Senate, the bill to establish the territorial government of Minesota was taken up and talked over a short time and postponed. A long debate then occurred on a private claim, which was passed. The balance of the day was occupied in consideration of private claims. In fact, onehalf the time of Congress is consumed in this
