We took this suite with us because we were fearful that the people of Baltimore and up stream to Harrisburg might doubt our identity, and we knew that this could not be the case if we had the legal authorities of the city of Washington to endorse us, and Mudd and Winter to endorse them. This evidence is what is required to identify a soldier, and we presume that as it satisfied the Paymaster General, it would be sufficient for the American people.

that they are on the Washington road. We found in the ladies' car a kind of cabin, with lockers and several loop-holes to look out upon the country as we passed along. Being too short to look out the usual side windows without a lift or two, we stationed ourselves by one of those loop-holes and watched the aspect of the country for a couple of hours. We were astonished, however, to see nothing but a ribbon or path of sand gravel the whole distance, and gravel the whole distance, and were about Lane, for doing as well as he did! follows, as near as we could make it out, by the chief burgess of York : "Welcome thou Second Washington, to the shades of ancient York. The son will set when you set, and rise when you rise; and when you revolve upon your axis the country will be covered with bran-new glory." To which we replied:

" Most Excellent Chief Burgess: We were made by the Ideas of March-like Minerva, full blown-but have no time to enter into particulars. We observe by the steaple that you are a godly set, and by the furnace chimneys that you indulge in pig iron and other staples. May you live until the snake of disunion strangles liberty; and when you die, may you be buried by some one of the Hunnas, or Wanas, that crinkle crankle around you; -and now hand us over that black bottle, and put on the steam.

Whiz-whiz-spit-whir-tick-a-licktick-a-lick-ding-long-squall! and we were at Columbia. Crossing that almighty mass of wood-work, called Columbia bridge, which is a pokerish place after dark, we streaked it through the great lumber yard street of that renowned place; and in a short time cut round the corner of a bacon store, and entered Lancaster-perhaps a little dry, and somewhat dusty.

Here we were at home. Here our friend Thaddeus approached, with the anxious committee of that remarkable borough, which turned whig upon the anti-masonic question, and never turned back again; and, with a tear of pleasure in his eye, welcomed us as the father and defender of the Wilmot Proviso, and protection to that stronghold if whig rejoicing. What we said in reply, we cannot just now remember, owing to the noise and confusion of the occasion : but we are confident that we dodged the questions, and piled the whole load upon Congress. Soon a procession was formed, and the very welkin rung with "Huzza for Zachashould be found on the route for the next ry Washington and the great whig party of Lancaster!" Two by two we then marched into Mrs Kenwig's quiet hotel. where we got a chance to slip away by our selves and write this short letter, kno wing that we have got to shake everybody's hand to-morrow, and that Governor Johnson, who knows what he is about, is to say what he pleases for us to the people. We swallowing, we had a confounded wet time shall now turn in, and vegetate upon the almighty prospect that fate has so unceremoniously opened before us. We observe that a writer in the Republic is getting positive in our absence, and denies that John Davis's son is going to England ahead of Abbott. You can just give him the contradiction in French, which in English means that he is as false as get us into any scrape about our diplomacy, while we are absent, for we know what we meant as well as the rest of them; and if John is cheated out of his outfit, we be unto the cooks that spoil the broth. In conclusion, we find that we are well known after we are introduced to everybody--little boys and all--and that the children talk Dutch or English, just as they happen to feel. Keep a bright eye after Thomas during our peregrination; for he is a horse and cart with a cross dog under the bottom, and can make a great show with a very little money.
