A KING AND A BRICK-MAKER.

A TALE. A king, near Pimlico, with Nose and State, Did very much a neighb'ring Brick-kiln bate, Because this kiln did vomit nasty smoke; Which smoke-I can't say very neatly bred, Did very often take it in the head, To blacken the great house, and try the King to

His sacred Majesty would, sputt'ring, say, Upon a windy day, choke.

" I'll make the Rascal and his Brick-kiln hop-Deuce take the smoke-the sulphur!-Zounds! It forces down my throat by pounds-My mouth's a downright blacksmith's shop."

One day, he was so pester'd by a cloud, He could not bear it, and thus bawl'd aloud, "Go, (roar'd his M-y unto a Page-Work'd, like a lion, to a dev'lish rage)

"Go, tell the Rascol, who the Brick-kiln owns, That, if he dares to burn another brick, Black all my house like soot, and make me sick. I'll tear his Kiln to rags, and break his bones."

Off set the Page, and soon his errand told: On which the Brick maker - a little bold, Exclaim'd, "He break my bones, good Master Tie say, my Kiln sha'nt burn another brick. Because it blacks his house, and makes him sick! Go give my compliments to master's rage, And say, more bricks I am resolved to burn; And-(if the smoke his worship's stomach turn To stop his royal mouth and snout)-Nay, more, good page, his M-y shall find, I'll always take th' advantage of the wind, And, durn me, try to smoke him out."

This was a dreadful message to a king, From a poor ragged rogue that dealt in mud: Yet, though so impudent a thing,

The fellow's rhet'ric could not be withstood, Stiff, as against poor Hastings, Edmund Burke, This Brick-maker went, tooth and nail, to work, And form'd a true Vesuvius on the eve: The smoke, in pitchy volumes, roll'd along, Rush'd thro' the royal dome, with sulphur strong, And then, ascending, darken'd all the sky.

Thus did this cloud of darkness daily shade The building, for the Lord's Anointed made, And blacken'd it, like Palls, that grace a burying: Thus was this Man of Mud and Straw employ'd. And at the thought so wicked, overjoyed, Of smoking his Liege Sov'reign like a Herring

Of serving him, as we do parts of Swine, Thought, with garden peas, a dish extremely fine But lo! this baneful Rogue of Brick, Fell, for his Sov'reign fortunately, sick, And, ere the wretch could please his spleen and SAND'S SARSAPARILLA stands forth alone, and by its own works proclaims its power Sheetings; Pillow-case Linens; Table Damask; and by its own works processing in the appeals of the suffering for relief have been answered. Thousands of cases of diseases have been cured by this invaluable Medicine, such as are not furnished in the records of time .- These things are not done in secret places. They are fig'd Linea Drillings; bl'k and fancy Cassimeres; brought before the world to substantiate, beyond doubt, the healthy virtues of this preparation; and the facts untold, although gigantic, are as plain as the light of day. The Sarsaparilla is combined with the most effectual aids, the most salutary productions, the most potent simples of the vegetable kingdom; and its unprecedented success in the restoration to health of those who had long pined under the most distressing chronic maladies, has given it an exalted character-furnishing as it does, evidence of its own intrinsic value, and recommending it to the afflicted in terms the afflicted only can know. It has long been a most important desideratum in the practice of medicine, to obtain a remedy similar to A large stock of common and French Calf this-one that would act on the Liver, Stomach.
