ONE- WAY TO CURE MANIA-POTU.

The New Orleans Delta tells an amusing story of a man who was cured of this terrible disease in a novel way. One of the Mexican adventurers had captured the fly called the Ichneumon, and had brought it to New Orleans, where it excited considerable curiosity by its voracious appetite, and the manner in which it destroyed and devoured insects. The patient alluded to had been one of its closest observers. Taking his grog rather freely, about that time the mania got hold of him, and he im-J. The Doctor pretended to see it, and seizing the boot jack, he dealt the poor fellow a subinder on the posteriors, which made him roar. The Doctor followed up the blows-the patient begged-the Doctor said he must kill the Ichneumonsthe patient leaped out of the bed and ran -the doctor followed, and very desteriously plied the boot-jack as the victim coursed round and round the room until he fell into the bed completely exhausted. The Doctor exclaimed he had killed all the Ichneumons, and asked him if he felt Line of 4 horse Post Coaches from Fayany more? He said they were all gone. The patient taking offence at the Doctor's manner, turned his face and made no reply. It was warm weather, and the patient lay with a very thin covering. The Doctor struck him two very severe blows with his whip, and left the room as fast as his legs would carry him. The patient was not far behind him, and as the Doctor mounted his horse, he, with his scant clothing, stood in the yard, discharging a shower of rocks TO PAINTERS, BUILDERS, and brickbats at him.
