Encourage North Carolina.

The undersigned is manufacturing, in Fayetteville, BOOT & SHOE POLISH, for superior to the Blacking purchased in the Northern Cities. He intends devoting his whole time to manufacturing and sending this very superior Polish, and calls upon all who think it to the interest of the Southern people, to become independent of Northern manufacturers, to give him their aid and patronage.
He is prepared to show, by absolute trial, to any one who will call upon him, the vast superiority of his over all other polishes or blacking now sold in North Carolina. Call and have your boots and shoes once completely blacked and polished, and be satisfied.
This article is offered at a price not higher than is usually charged for other and inferior qualities, and a trial is all that is asked to secure the patronage of the public generally.
The undersigned expects to visit every portion of the State to introduce his polish, and asks now in advance that Merchants and others visiting Fayetteville will give him a call.
This Polish can be used by ladies without soiling the dress.

EXPERIMENT OF TRANSFUSION OF BLOOD.

PARIS, Nov. 6, 1851.
An interesting, and thus far successful, experiment upon the transfusion of blood, was made some days ago at the Hotel-Dieu of Lyons. A woman had been seized with violent hemorrhage, the consequence of a premature delivery. Her condition seemed desperate; it presented all the symptoms of the agony that follows great loss of blood—entire absence of color in the skin, pallor of the lips, inability to swallow, difficulty of respiration, extreme weakness, but extraordinary rapidity of the pulse. Death appeared imminent, inevitable.
Doctor Delorme suggested transfusion. This was at first combated by the other physicians as offering no chance of success, but was finally assented to, as the case being a desperate one, it could do no harm, even if it did no good. One of the young aspirants, residing in the hospital, offered to furnish the blood necessary to the operation. A syringe was immersed in warm water and kept there till it became of a temperature a little higher than that of blood in circulation.—The proper vein in the arm of the sufferer was then opened, and a fine canula, or tube, was introduced, to some length. The other end of the tube was then fitted to the syringe, which was enveloped in warm towels, and in which was the necessary quantity of pure human blood. The operator then gently forced into the veins of the dying woman the revivifying fluid.
At this moment, as she afterwards declared, she felt a grateful warmth spread over her body, without having the reasoning faculty strong enough to trace it to any cause. Soon after, she recovered in a great degree her senses and eye-sight. A few hours later, a reaction manifested itself so violently, that the physicians were seriously alarmed. It seemed as if death might result as well from too much, too active vitality, as from vitality too much exhausted and enfeebled. But a calming potion soon diminished this unnatural action, and the patient has since been regularly improving. The last intelligence from Lyons states that it is now hardly possible that a relapse can occur, and that the cure may be set down as complete.
Where will modern science stop its enquiring steps upon the subject of blood transfusion, and the impossible? This woman of Lyons was very, very nearly as much raised from the dead as was the son of the Widow of Nain.

GREEN CORN IN PARIS.

You are probably aware that corn (Indian corn) is unknown in Paris. It is neither known as green corn, nor as sweet corn, nor as pop corn; as corn in the kernel, or corn on the ear. It is rarely seen, even when ground into Indian meal. I speak of Paris, and the neighborhood, only; for I believe that it is cultivated in the south of France, to a limited extent, under the name of maïs. I was, some weeks ago, at a dinner party, given by an American gentleman, at his chateau, in a suburb of Paris. Upon the table were green corn and sweet potatoes, results of perhaps the only efforts ever made to acclimate them here. As the corn was passed around, you might have distinguished the Americans from the French, by noticing who accepted and who declined. The former were eager to renew an acquaintance long since interrupted, while the latter fought shy and kept the waiters at bay. It fell to my lot, however, to initiate into the mysteries of this novel vegetable a young French lady at my right hand. To her, the ear upon her plate, was a revelation. Its shape was anomalous, its odor singular, and moreover, the manner of eating it was barbarous. Before attempting its demolition, many an unanswered inquiry passed through her bewildered little brain. Was the outside a mere rind, inclosing the pulp in the interior? Or was it nutriment to the core, and succulence to the centre? Did it have a stone? Did it intoxicate, like the maguery? Would the juice start forth, as from a ripe tomato, at the first immersion of the teeth? Might it not be poisonous, like the nightshade or the toad-stool? By this time, her ear was ready, buttered, salted, and each row slit through the center. I flatter myself that the utter failure of the experiment can in no way be attributed to want of skill here. My pupil eat about half a double row, and then retired from the field, content with the laurels she had won, but perplexed by the cob, and sorely teased by the tissue like-skin, in which kernels were involved. The next day she was taken sick, and was compelled to keep her room. Anxious to prove to her that however lightly she might treat the offending vegetable, it was made, in former times, the subject of thanksgiving to whole races and nations, I sent her an engraving from Mr Catlin's frightful picture of a "Chippewa Dance" to thank the Great Spirit for Green Corn. She thought that to a Spirit, that favored the growth and presided over the harvesting of such a product, just such a demonstration would be acceptable. The demoniac orgies in which those Chippewas were indulging, could not be more fittingly introduced, than at a Green Corn Festival.

THE NEXT PRESIDENCY.

The Whig party which has been beaten almost out of existence in the elections of this year, and which for all practical, useful purposes, is literally dead and buried, is casting about for some new device upon which to make another stand. They are about to slough off the name of Whig and try their fortunes under another alias, that of the Union National Party. By this manoeuvre they hope to get a share of the offices, as they see clearly there is no shadow of hope for their keeping any under their present organization. One of the leading Whig journals now before us, in treating upon this question, says: "The true policy then for the country (that is the Whig party) is to organize a Constitutional Union Party, and run a ticket for President and Vice President, composed of one Whig and one Democrat."
Wouldn't that be nice, especially if the Whig should be for President and the Democrat for Vice President? What very cunning fellows these Whigs are. No sooner did they find themselves thoroughly beaten before the people as a distinct party, than they are ready to swear there is no difference between the parties, "we are all Federalists—we are all Democrats," let us unite and have a Union ticket; all we care for is the country, but we shall expect to get the best offices and the most of them."
This is Whig policy—this is the Exchange Union ticket on a National scale. We wonder how many Democrats throughout the Union will be caught by such a trap. The Democratic party have nothing to do but to name as their candidates men known to be friends of the Union; men of tried and proved patriotism, who will stand firmly by the constitution and see its provisions faithfully carried out, and their success is as certain as any event still in the future can be. We want no mongrel tickets—we are for the Union, the Constitution and the Compromises—and we know that a large and overwhelming majority of the Democratic party is also for these things—there is no necessity for a union with Whigs on this subject. If the Whig party is sound on these questions let them make their nominations based upon their devotion to these cardinal points.—Baltimore Argus.
