HARD READING.

"I would not read such a book," said John to his friend David. "I read easy books."

" Father says this will improve my mind more than any of the story books," said it. I think I shall like it very much." "I tried to read a book a great deal like that, and it was not at all interesting. I could not keep my mind upon it all. When I got to the bottom of the page, I could not tell what I had been reading about. I want a book to be so interesting that I cannot think of any thing else till I get through with it."

" Father says, that if my attentoin wanders when I am reading. I must go back and read over again the portion that I do not recollect. I have read some of the pages of this book a great many times be-fore I could keep my attention fixed upon the thoughts contained in them."

"I do not wish to take so much trouble when I read. It makes it too hard work." The book that David was reading when John spoke to him as above noticed, was joyfully-yourself! Watts on the mind-a book which contains a great many judicious rules for mental culture. David's father had given it to his son, and requested him to read it puling sentiment. God pity them! - as carefully. It is a book which all young persons would do well to study. There are too many young persons, who, like John, read only for amusement. They seldom derive much benefit from reading. Banks which were written merely to amuse, should be avoided. No man who loves the young will write with no higher object than to afford amusement. AN UNCALLED FOR AMEN. - A correspondent of the Methodist Protestant relates the following story.

A very sensitive Preacher, in a certain village not more than a hundred miles from Baltimore, was discoursing with great make immediate payment. " Amen," was the audible response of a pious and much loved brother in the congregation.

The Preacher was evidently disconcerted for a moment. He thought the brother tion with still greater emphasis: " Be- year, they humbly beg a continuance of the same fore another hour your speaker may be in eternity!"

"Amen," shouted the brother before him.

It was too much for the sensitive man ; and stammering out a few additional remarks, he sat down before he had finished his discourse.

" Brother -," said the Preacher next day to his kind-hearted friend of the amen corner, "what did you mean by saying amen to my remarks last night? Did you wish I was dead ?"

"Not at all, ' said the good brother, "not at all. I thought if you should die you would go straight to glory, and I meant amen to that."

A HINT TOUCHING LOVE LETTERS .-The French have completely, of late, excelled themselves in the extreme beauty of their note paper, and the tender and appropriate mottoes by which it is embellished, but there is a description of paper of which, I believe, they know the secret, which I think far more desirable for love letters than the most exquisite of their bright sheets, embellished with laced Bargains! The paper had been steeped in some chemical preparation, that in a few hours had corroded and destroyed it. Now, if love letters were always written on this paper, how much time would be saved! for young ladies must perforce compress their studies of these precious productions in a very short space of time. How many reputations would be saved! for destroyed letters, like dead men, can subscribers will please call and settle their retell no tales. How many lawyer's fees would be saved! for the most skillful counsellors could never torture a heap of ashes into what they call "documents." How much patience would be saved! for, although it is very delightful to read love letters addressed to one's self, yet it is a paintul effort of friendship to be obliged to listen to those addressed to other people. How unnecessary, too, would be the postcript, which is never attended to : "Burn this as soon as you have read it!" The "chemist's magic art" would make the request equal to a command sure to be obeyed.
