"Very well," said the man, "I am not afraid of ghosts." After having refreshed himself, he inquired of the landlord now and in what manner the room in which he was to lodge was haunted. The landlord replied that shortly after they retired to rest, an unknown voice was heard in a trembling and protracted accent, saving. " Do you w-a-n-t to be sh-a-v-ed ?", "Welt," replied the man;

"if he comes he may shave me." He then requested to be shown to the which covered the body. He arose from his bed and searched every part of the room, but could discover nothing. He again went to bed but no sooner had he begun to sleep than the question was again repeated. He again arose and went to the window, the sound appearing at the Doctor's establishment, in York- to proceed from that quarter, and stood awinle silent-after a few moments of anxious suspense, he again heard the sound distinctly, and convinced that it was from without, he opened the window, when the question was repeated full in his ear which startied him not a little. Upon a minute examination, however, he observed that the limb of a large oak thee, which stood under his window, projected so near the house, that every breath of wind, to a lowly imagination, made a noise resembling the interrogation, ... Do you want to be sh-a-ved ?" faving satisfied himself that his ghost was nothing more nor less than the limb of a tree coming in contact with the house, he again went to bed and attempted to get asleep; but he was now interrupted by the peals of laughter and an occasional volley of oaths and curses from the room where The House is in good repair, and one of the the gamblers were assembled. Thinking towel over his arm, proceeded to the room of the gamblers, and suddenly opening the door, stalked in, exclaiming in a tremulons voice, .. Do you want to be shaved !" Terrified at the sudden appearance of the ghost the gamblers were thrown into the greatest confusion in attempting to escape it; some jumping out of the windows, and others tumbling heels over head down stairs. Our ghost, taking advantage of a clear room, deliberately swept a large amount of money from the table into the basin, and retired unseen to his room. The next morning he found the house in teplied in the affirmative. "Well, no wonder." said the landlord, "for the ghost instead of going to his own room, made a New Stock of Spring & Summer | u.istake and came to ours, hightened us out of the room, and took away every dollar of our money." The guest without being the least suspected, quietly ate his breakfast and departed, many hundred doilars richer by the adventure.

Instead of first saluting the flag of England, he made for the American consulate, heard Mr Chas- seaud's story, and the parties repaired to the governor's palace. The officials thought proper to acceed to demands pressed so vigorously upon their attention—the of- tending soldiers underwent punishment— the reparation was made; and when the trouble came to an end, the British consul got his salute. The energetic action of Captain Franklin saved a world of trouble, and the interest now attaching to the wel- tare of the distinguished navigator, lends attraction to the incident.
