The guests, somewhat indignant, exclaimed: "Like men, of course. "Then," replied he, "we are going to get jolly drunk, for brates never drink more than they want?

----RUTH OF A YOUNG LADY BY A FORTUNE-TELLER -The following, from the New York Express, conveys its own warning;

"Complaint was this morning lodged at the mayor's office against a forture-teller, having her rooms in Great Jones street, who advertises to secure husbands, &c. It seems that the young lady in question saw one of those advertisements. and called on the fortune-teller in relation to it: that she (the fortune-teller)told her that she would register her (the girl's) name, and secure her a husband for $5. This she readily paid, in the vain hope of securing to herself a good husband. She was subsequently infroduced at this fortune-teller's house to a young gentleman, who was represented as being in search of a wife. The pleasing manners of the young man soon won her affections-so much so, that she agreed to a proposition formally made by him, which was, that as soon as winter set in he would take her to a ball, and there respectable person. He subsequently, by histelling.
