NORTH CAROLINIAN.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C. An Indian Tragedy.

The incident recorded below, and which is of recent occurrence, has been copied from one of our Western exchanges:

Logan Fontanelle, chief of the Omahas, has just been slain and scalped at Lonp Fork, by a band of Sioux. Logan was a noble fellow, and in this last mortal conflict, he dispatched several of the enemy to the spirit land before, to herald the coming of his own soul. He fought the sighs and lamentations of his nation, and long, desperately, and with good effect, but the signs and aspirations of the brave of parted through a hundred wounds. The Sioux, in the meanwhile, had divided into small bands, the largest of which was to return and pursue the Omahas, and the others to endeavor to capture the one they had missed. They knew that he must be an Omaha, and that he would either go further and kindle another watch-fire, or start for his nation in a straight line, and therefore one party went on a little further, and the others spread out towards the Omaha country, for the purpose of intercepting him .- Logan passed forward as fast as his jaded steed could bear him, until he thought he had entirely cluded them, but as the day dawned, to his horror and dismay, he saw his pursuers close upon his track. He turned his These Bedsteads are manufactured in this place, and course for a ravine which he distinguished at a can be sold to dealers as low as they can be got from distance, covered with trees and undergrowth. > SURTOUTS FOR LADIES .- A new article of ladies' dress has made its appearance in Broadway, and as a description of it may prove of interest to our lady readers, we give one we find examined the ground more closely, both far in the Home Journal. That paper says: "A promenade over-dress-being a close fitting coat like the New York surtout worn only by gentlemen-only not so long. It is all the rage at present in Paris, and pear drab cachemere or Pelisse cloth are the goods preferred. The Logan was then going round with glaring cut is double breasted, with four pearl, or passementerie, buttons on each side of the lapels, and two buttons at the waist behind, at the junction of the box plaits and side seams. The collar is quite small. The sleeves are cut in pagoda style-that is, with a very little fullness that his own people had taken, they would be at the arm hole, and formed to fit the arm nearly to the elbow, from whence they widen so as to become very large and flowing at the wrist, where they are turned over to form a round cuff of three inches depth. For a waist sixteen inches in length, the skirts should be about eighteen inches long, and cut in a regular circle, to sew without fullness to the bodice, and still fall gracefully over a hooped skirt of moderate amplitude. The linings are of silk fine galloon. There are two diagonal pockets in the skirts. This garment should be cut and made by a tailor who possesses some knowledge of the ornamental art, when it becomes the most to the following effect: He was holding forth in Rochester, and in walking along the canal one day, came across a boatman who was swearing furiously .- Marching up, he confronted him, and abruptly asked-

"Sir, do you know where you are going?" The unsuspecting man innocently replied that he was going up the canal on the boot Johnny

"No, sir, you are not," continued Finney, "you are going to hell faster than a canal boat The boatman looked at him in astonishment for a minute, and then returned the question;

"Sir, do you know where you are going?" "I expect to go to heaven." "No, sir, you are going into the canal !" And suiting the action to the word, took Finney in his arms and tossed him into the murkey
